BIBLIOTHECA. ASIATICA

FOREWORD.

WE have much pleasure in announcing the publication of a series of catalogues devoted entirely to books, manuscripts, views, portraits, autograph material and illuminated manuscripts and miniatures relating to Asia and the Philippines, under the title of "Bibliotheca Asiatica."

This series of catalogues will be copiously annotated and illustrated with numerous facsimiles.

It would be invidious to draw distinctions between the rarity of the different items of importance in Part I.

It is sufficient to name manuscripts of the Koran, dating from the tenth and twelfth centuries; an unpublished manuscript cosmography with ten world maps, dated 1486; the Ptolemy of 1511 printed on vellum; illuminated manuscripts, the earliest of which was illuminated about the year 1500, including manuscripts of Hafiz, Firdusi, and Nizami. Several hundred single illuminated miniatures and drawings, both Persian and Indian, are described and many illustrated.

A very interesting series of books of the greatest importance are those written by the Fathers of the Society of Jesus, including St. Francis Xavier's Account of his arrival in Japan and his attempts at conversion of the Japanese (No. 27), the First Collection of Spanish Missionary Relations of 1555 (No. 30), and many other single Relations and Reports.

The catalogue is especially rich in books on Japan, China, the Philippines, and the East Indies (including the Portuguese account of the attacks on their East Indian shipping by the English and Dutch privateers of 1604, No. 102).

Of unique importance is the manuscript journal of the first official voyage from England to Japan, 1611-1613, written by Capt. Saris, Chief-in-Command, and presented by him to Sir Francis Bacon.

Among the specially noteworthy miniatures are a portrait of Mohammad Ali, the painter of Ispahan, by Mansur (No. 204); a remarkable miniature by a Turkish artist of the Dancing Dervishes at Constantinople (No. 205); and a very decorative miniature portrait of Bahadur, the last Emperor of Delhi, seated on the famous Peacock Throne, surrounded by his sons and ministers (No. 801).

The second part of the Bibliotheca Asiatica is in active preparation, and will be entirely devoted to original autograph letters and manuscripts from the missionaries working in China, Japan, the Philippines, the Marianna Islands, India, etc., to the Duchess d'Aveiro d'Arcos y Maqueda, a great lady of Madrid in the 17th century, equally renowned for her wealth, her influence, and her piety. She used her influence and her wealth to help missions for the conversion of savages in every part of the globe to the Roman Catholic Church.

As she was most generous in lavishing her fortune on her protégés, the "Mother of the Missions," as she is called, received regular letters and reports from all the missionaries on the progress of their labours, details of the lives and sufferings of their co-workers and converts.

As all these letters were intended only for the eyes of the Duchess, and never for publication, each Father naturally endeavoured to interest the wealthy Duchess in all the details of his special mission.

In this way a remarkably truthful and extraordinarily vivid series of letters has been preserved dealing in detail with the history of the missions in Asia.

This second part will only be sent on application, as it will be printed in a limited edition.

Two things I now humbly pray of you, first, that this time be understood to begin two years and two months ago, when the Lord your father passed out of this life. Hain *11019.

On the verso of leaf A 1 is a modified Ptolemaic Map of the World engraved on wood, which shows Europe, Asia, and the northern portion of Africa. On the latter we find the Nile, with its sources in two lakes, one directly on the equator, and the other just south of it. These lakes correspond in place with those now called the Albert and Victoria Nyanza, showing that their location was surmised, if not actually known to geographers, at least four centuries before their late discovery. At the south, streams rising in mountains flow into these lakes. The Niger in western Africa is also laid down.

Of Pomponius Mela nothing whatever is known, but he is believed to have lived in the time of the Emperor Claudius. This is one of the earliest geographical works, the editio princeps of which appeared in 1471. It is written in a clear and simple style, and notwithstanding its conciseness is enlivened with interesting descriptions of manners and customs.

In the Church Catalogue only five other copies are mentioned (British Museum; Bodleian; University Library, Cambridge, England; John Carter Brown; and Lenox Libraries).

THE WORLD IN 1486.

1486-1488 A.D. [6] COSMOGRAPHY.

A most important unpublished manuscript, written at Luebeck in 1486-1488 on 50 pages of paper, and shewing what was known of parts of America and Africa, and of the various countries of Europe and Asia six years before the sailing of Columbus, and giving other information of Medical and Astronomical interest. Commencing "Nota tres fuerunt Babilonie. . . ."

The Manuscript contains 10 World Maps and 12 other Geographical and Astronomical diagrams of a most interesting character.

Folio, 49 pp., morocco, g. e., by Riviere.

Luebeck, 1486.

(SEE ILLUSTRATION, PLATE No. II.).

£375

This curious manuscript contains a remarkable mixture of mediaeval legend and classical learning.

PAGE 1 contains an account of Noah and of the division of the Earth among his three sons; Europe to Japhet, Africa to Shem, and Asia to Ham. This is illustrated by a world map of the normal Tau-design, in which the world is represented by the three continents of Asia, Europe, and Africa, divided from each other by water, roughly assuming the form of the letter "T," the whole world is also surrounded by water.

PAGES 2 AND 3 contain an account of the provinces and islands of Asia. Concerning India the author remarks: "I believe the beginning of India to be distant barely 600 German leagues from the Holy Land, and 200 leagues through India to the Islands in the Ocean-sea, which extend also for 200 leagues in latitude as far as Paradise."

PAGE 4 contains an account of the Islands of Europe (continued from page 3). Among those mentioned are Venice, Iceland, Norwegia, Suecia and Dacia, Vinlandia, Gronlandia, Hybernica, Scotia, Anglia et Brittannia, Tile insula ultima (Thule), the Fortunate Islands, Gordonides insule, Hesperides, etc.

This section is especially important for its early American interest, six years prior to the expedition of Columbus. In connection with Greenland the author remarks that it is surrounded by formidable deeps and therefore very difficult of access; that the natives are giants and still uncivilized and have hardly heard of Christianity. This statement is also of importance as shewing that its author was not influenced by the work of the famous geographer Adam of Bremen, who knew very well that Christianity had been introduced into Greenland long before this date. Thule is stated as lying to the West of Iceland. Norway and Sweden are described as forming an island. The Northern parts of the Baltic Sea were not properly known and it was generally believed that it joined up with the great ocean. In connection with the Fortunate Islands, the author states that they are so fertile that some people believe them to be Paradise. The Fortunate Islands, Gorgonides, and Hesperides, now form the Canary Islands, the Azores, and the Madeiras. Vinland is stated by the author to be of great extent, stretching to Livonia, its people are Christians and speak a special language of their own. The name Vinland or Wineland was used by Adam of Bremen as early as 1070. It was applied to the land discovered by Leif Ericson and the Greenlanders to the South-West of Greenland about the year A.D. 1000, and which in all probability constituted Labrador and Newfoundland. In later years the name became confused with Finland.

PAGE 5. This contains a world map of Tau-design, surrounded by the Ocean in which are placed all the world's great islands, numbering twenty-one, and being placed in their positions relative to Europe, Asia, and Africa. Among them may be mentioned "Thabrona" (Taprobana or Ceylon) lying adjacent to India. "Islandia, Suecia, Norwegia, Gronlandia, Scotia, Hibernia, Anglia, Tile (Thule), Fortunate Insule, Gorgonides Insule, Hesperides Insule," etc.

PAGE 6 contains an exceptionally curious double map illustrative of the islands in the Mediterranean Sea.

PAGES 7-8 contain an account of the various countries of Europe and Africa, and more particularly of Germany, Italy, Spain, and France.

PAGE 9 contains a diagram of mountains, and an account of the mountains of the Holy Land and the adjacent countries.

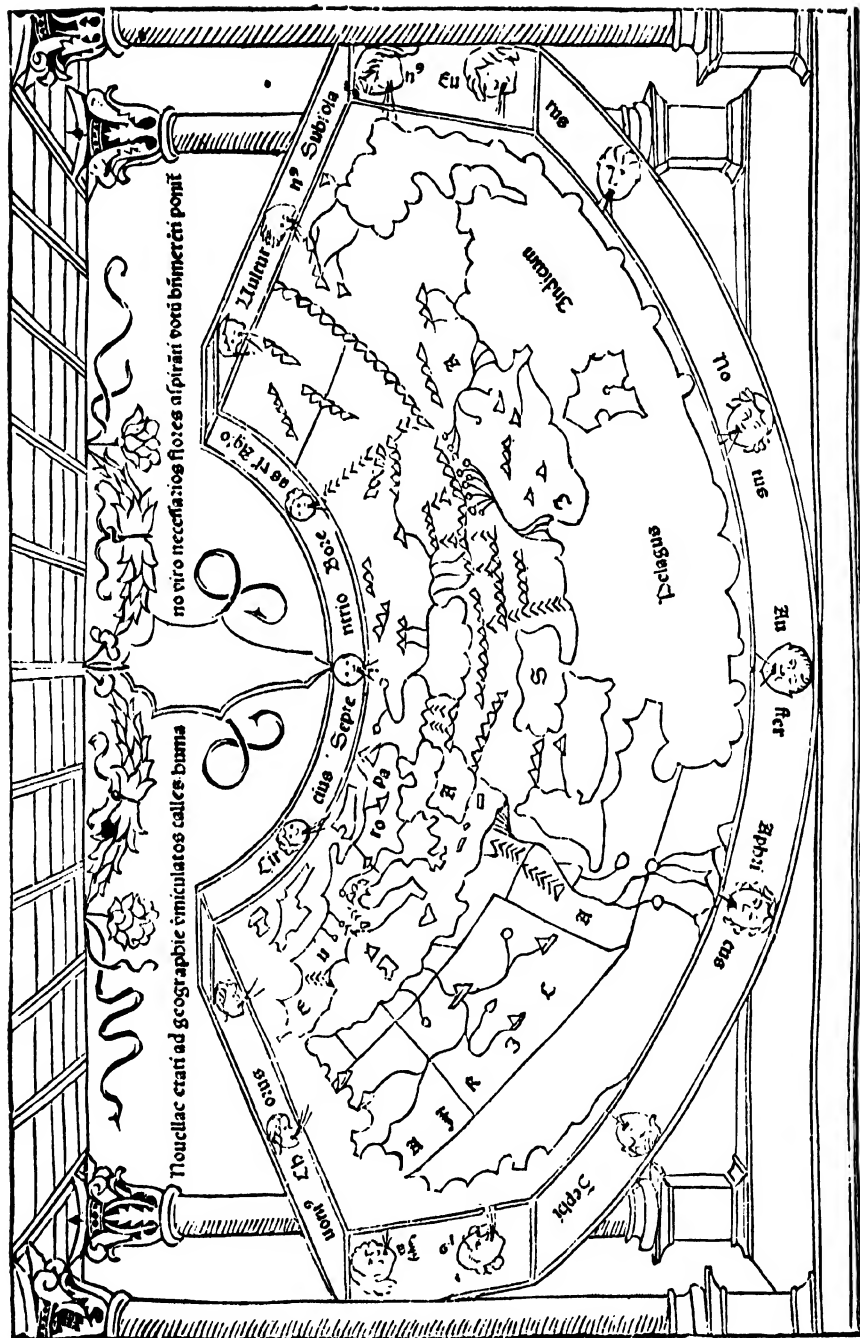

PAGES 10-11 contain an account of famous world conquerors, Nebuchadnezzar, Cyrus, and Alexander the Great. In connection with Alexander the author remarks that he penetrated as far as China but did not enter that country. Then comes an account of the twelve Apostles, and lastly another World Map of Tau-design, illustrating the Empires of the World, Babylon, Nineveh, Roman Empire at Constantinople, old Roman Empire, Carthage, etc., with some remarks on the distances from Lübeck to Iceland and Palestine.

PAGES 12-13 contain a fine and extremely important double page World Map, after the usual Tau-design, entitled "Mappa mundi localis."

This particular map has been utilized for publication by Dr. A. A. Björnbo, the great Danish historian of cartography, as plate 1 of his last work, published just before his death, "Cartographia Groenlandica" (forming vol. xlviii of "Meddetelsor om Groenland," 1912, p. 76). In the text he remarks concerning it: "Thus here we see Greenland as a round island opposite Iceland, and just north of Denmark and Germany. To put a wide sea between Europe and Greenland, and the latter far to the West, as should have been done, was something which evidently could not be done on such a spherical map, even if, as in this case, special care was taken to get plenty of room for the newly discovered lands."

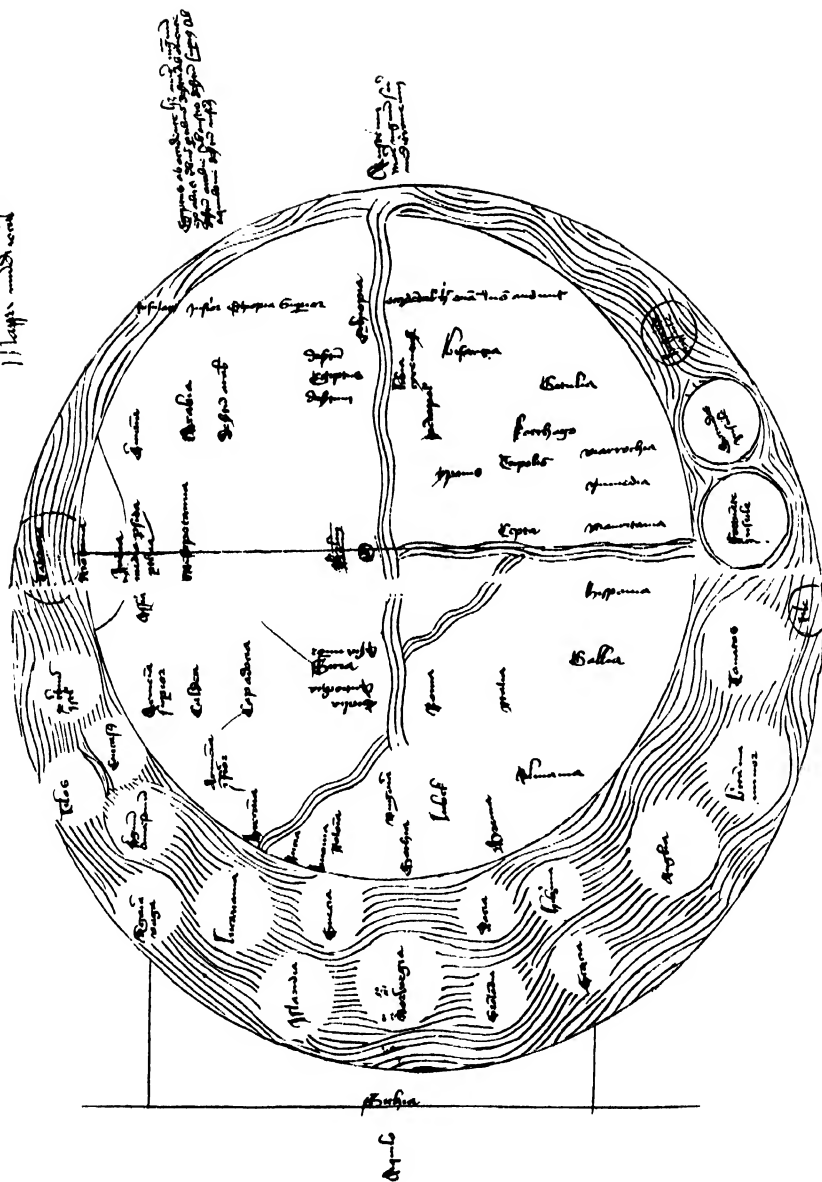

There is considerable similarity between this map and the one on page 5, only in this one the majority of the names mentioned throughout the work are given, whereas in the smaller map only the names of the continents and the various islands are given.

PAGES 14-15 contain another double-page World Map, entitled "Mappa de aquis terram irrigantibus." This is a very curious map depicting the four streams of Paradise spreading over the earth: the Euphrates, the Tigris, the Nile or the Gihon, and the Phison or Pison (sometimes supposed to be the Nerbudda in India, or the Oxus).

PAGES 16-24 contain a succession of world maps, seven in number, illustrating the successive Empires and Eras of the World; the text to these contains many curious and interesting remarks, including numerous passages on Mohammed and the Turks, and two references to "this year 1486." On page 22 is a curious diagram of the world on the Day of Judgment, and on page 24 a geometrical diagram, which the author says he has calculated according to the rules of Geometry.

PAGE 25 contains a diagram illustrating the 13 Spheres of the Universe: the atmosphere, fire, the moon, the various planets, and the Empyrean.

PAGE 26 contains two diagrams illustrating the sun and its course round the earth. In the text the author remarks that the circumference of the sun is eight times that of the earth, or is 64,000 German leagues.

PAGE 27 contains a World Map marking the four rivers of Paradise and shewing the Ptolemaic climates. The text makes mention of Iceland, Greenland, Lübeck, Hamburg, Rostock, and Wismar; and the author also remarks that the people called by the merchants the Laps, and dwelling between Russia and Sweden, are still pagans.

PAGE 28 contains an astronomical map of the climates indicating the duration of the longest day.

PAGE 29 contains a World Map shewing the scattering of the Apostles, with some curious legends.

PAGES 30-31 contain a list of various countries and places, assigning each to its climate; and an epilogue of the three parts of the World. Among other statements the author remarks that by the will of God the Ten Tribes of Israel were confined to the mountainous district between the Caucasus and the Caspian by Alexander the Great; and that from the year 639, when the Mohammedans first began to break up the Roman Empire, to this year 1488, they have continued their conquests until they have taken nearly the whole world.

PAGES 32-33 contain Biblical Genealogies.

PAGES 34-36 concern the Four Monarchies, the prophecies of Daniel and the Apocalypse, and similar matters.

PAGES 37-38 refer to medicine, and comprise two chapters entitled "Canon primus de fleubotomia," "Canon Secundus de farmacia idem medicina."

PAGES 39-50 contain a long treatise on Astronomy and Astrology, illustrated by two diagrams for horoscopes.

Solinus was a Roman geographer, probably of the third century. His compilation "De memorabilibus mundi" was a great favourite in the middle ages. It was first translated into English by Arthur Golding in 1587, and gives accounts of the various parts of the world, as then known, including Arabia, Ethiopia, Egypt, the Euphrates and the Tigris, Armenia, Assyria and Media, River Oxus, India (6 pp.), Babylon, the Atlantic Islands (the Gorgades, Hesperides, and Fortunate Isles), etc.

This is the rarest issue of this exceedingly scarce tract. The woodcuts appear here for the first time—it was first printed in Rome three months prior but without the cuts.

In this most interesting work the most notable feats of arms are summarily related which were accomplished by the Portuguese in Mombaza, Cannanore, Cochin, etc., in the year 1505. This is apparently also the first work to mention Ceylon (under the name of "Taprobana"). These events took place under the Viceroyalty of Francis d'Almeida, Count of Abrantes, who became Viceroy of Portuguese India in 1505. During his administration the Portuguese discovered Ceylon, the Maldive Islands, and Madagascar, to which the name of St. Laurence was given. He intended subduing the whole of the Malabar Coast, but before he could put his project into execution, he quarrelled with Albuquerque and resigned. He was killed by an arrow, near the Cape of Good Hope, in a quarrel with the Kaffirs, on 1st March, 1509, on his return journey to Europe.

1511 A.D. [11] PTOLEMAEUS (Claudius).

Liber Geographiae cum tabulis et universali figura et cum additione locorum quae a recentioribus reperta sunt.

With 28 woodcut maps on 30 leaves.

Printed in red and black on 65 leaves of VELLUM and 26 leaves of paper, in Roman Letter, double columns, with 60 lines to a full column.

Folio, levant morocco, g. c., by Rivière.

Venice, Jacobus Pentius de Leucho, 20th March, 1511. £150

Harrisse 68. Sabin 66477.

Copies printed on VELLUM are exceedingly scarce.

Latin version of Jacobus Angelus, edited with many corrections by Bernardus Sylvanus of Eboli, the principles of which are developed in the introduction.

Sylvanus was the first to break with the blind confidence that almost every scholar in the beginning of the 16th century had in the atlas of the old Alexandrian geographer. . . . For the first time we here meet with maps having the letter-press printed in red and black, and contrary to what generally was and yet is the custom, both sides of the paper or vellum are used for the map print, excepting for the new map of the new world, where the reverse is left blank. The maps are from woodcuts, for which the legends are produced by types fitted into blocks. . . .

The greatest importance of this edition for the history of cartography, consists in the cordiform map of the world . . . the first on this projection. This is the second printed map of the world, in the delineation of which some attention has been paid to the great geographical discoveries of the preceding years. (This map) "Contains the first printed delineation of any portion of the North American Continent, under the names of "Regalis Domus" . . . and "Terra Laboratorus." (Labrador.)

It represents the New World in an extremely curious way. Brazil, a large tract, is called Terra Sanctae Crucis, and the cartographer evinces acquaintance with the results of Columbus' third voyage, and Vespucci's second and third voyages. The continuity is broken by the margin in consequence of the peculiar plan of the map, so that Cuba and Hispaniola appear next above, near their proper places; and far beyond them, at the same degree of latitude as Ireland, an unfinished shore bearing the words "Regalis Domus," indicates the northern continent, while Labrador (Terra Laboratorus) is represented as an island off the coast. This is the first graphic record of the discoveries (in 1500) of Corte Real. Greenland (Engronelát) is drawn as a peninsula of north-west Europe. Coming nearer home, it is remarkable that in this book, Scotland is properly drawn for the first time as forming a northern extension of England. It is also remarkable for the manner in which the names are printed on the map, this having been done by types after the woodcut had been worked off. This is the first instance in which such a method of operation was ever adopted.

About 1520 A.D. [12] HAFIZ.

Harrisse No. 210. Sabin No. 66483. Medina Vol. I. No. 98.

This edition was edited by Michael Villanovanus, better known as Servetus, born at Villanueva, Aragon, whose preface fills the verso of the title-page, and who also wrote many of the modern descriptions on the backs of the maps. The woodcut borders and ornaments which surround the map descriptions are supposed by some critics to be the work of Hans Holbein and Urs Graf of Basel.

The celebrity of this edition is largely due to its association with the trial and burning alive of its editor, Servetus, in 1553. Many copies of this book are said to have been burned at the same time by the orders of Calvin. One of the charges or pretexts brought against Servetus was the alleged authorship of a statement, printed on the back of map 41 of this edition, reflecting on the climate and soil of Palestine. The passage in question, however, was not written by him, but had been copied from the same map in the editions of 1522 and 1525. It was omitted in his second edition printed at Vienne in the Dauphiné, in 1541.

The Asiatic maps comprise:—Asia Minor; Sarmatia; Armenia, etc.; Syria, Mesopotamia, etc.; Persia, etc.; Arabia Felix; Scythia (2); Aria, etc. (Afghanistan and Baluchistan); India intra Gangem; India extra Gangem; Taprobane insula (Ceylon); The Old World; New Maps of Asia Minor; Palestine; India; China and Japan; India and Malay Peninsula, etc.; Two World-Maps; etc.

Peter Bienevitz, better known under his Latinized name Petrus Apianus, was a Professor of Astronomy at the University of Ingolstadt, for more than thirty years. He was an inventor of astronomical instruments and designed one of the earliest maps which contains the name America. His mathematical and astronomical works must always take a prominent rank among those relating to the discoveries in the Western Hemisphere.

This edition of Apianus contains the second impression of the large folding map of the World which first appeared in the French edition of the previous year. The name America appears in the lower part, and in the upper part the word "Baccalarum." References to America appear in the text on folios 30 and 48. On folio 30 there is a special chapter devoted entirely to America, various other sections relate to Asia.

Sabin No. 51331.

The first large map is that of the world, and has the names Brazil, Florida, Cuba, Hispaniola, Corterat (Newfoundland), and Straits of Magellan, on the American Continent.

The 14th large map is of the New World, and shews the whole of North and South America; it is entitled "Tabula novarum insularum, quas diversis respectibus Occidentales & Indianas vocant." On the South American Continent the words "Die Nüw Welt," appear in large type—the only German on the map, an indication of its use in the editions in that language. Yucatan appears as an island.

Among the maps of Asiatic interest are: Map of the Old World, Greece and Asia Minor, and Asia. A fine view is given of Constantinople; and Accounts of the Turks; various parts of Asia Minor; Map of Tartary (in the text); Account of Palestine, with a view of Jerusalem; Accounts of Babylon, Arabia, Assyria, Persia, Parthia, Scythia, Tartary, India, Conquests of Alexander the Great, New Discoveries in India, Calicut, Sumatra, Borneo, Java, Cathay, etc.

"Munster occupies a peculiar position as a cartographer; he far surpasses most of the map-drawers of his time in his exertions to get access to the latest information regarding the history, ethnology, and geography of the countries he describes. His bulky cosmography will therefore always remain an important source for the history of civilisation of the period in which he lived." (Nördenskiöld, Facsimile Atlas).

Magnificent copy, with wide margins, of the first translation into French of Marco Polo's travels

"Marco Polo, the celebrated traveller of the 13th Century, was the son of a Venetian merchant, who, with his brother, had penetrated to the court of Kublai, the Great Khan of the Tartars. This Prince, being highly entertained with their account of Europe, made them his Ambassadors to the Pope; on which they travelled back to Rome in 1269, and with two missionaries once more visited Tartary, accompanied by the young Marco, who became a great favourite with the Khan. After a residence of 17 years they returned to Italy, in 1295, with immense wealth. Marco afterwards served at sea against the Genoese, and, being taken prisoner, remained many years in confinement, in which time he wrote the famous account of his travels. Marco Polo related many things which appeared incredible, but the general truthfulness of his narrative has been established by succeeding travellers. The book appears to have been originally written in a kind of Italianised French."

Manoel de Sousa left Cochin on February 3rd, 1552, in the Great Galleon the "Sam Joam," bound for Portugal, and met with a gale on the Natal Coast, which drove the ship ashore on May 12th. De Sousa, his wife, and child, a number of the crew, and some slaves escaped ashore. They endeavoured to reach Sofala, but encountered terrible privations, and were constantly attacked by the natives. Finally, after a 300 league journey overland, De Sousa and his family were stripped by the Kaffirs and perished. Only eight Portuguese and a few slaves eventually escaped to Mozambique. It is said that the value of the cargo of the ill-fated vessel was worth a million pounds in gold.

The narrative of this disaster was commemorated in poems by Camoens and other poets.

(Trans.):—"Although for some time past, obeying a sacred sentence which says accursed be he who trusts in man, I have desisted, my most honoured Lord, not only from putting any faith in man, but, as though by negligence, I have, for twenty-two years past, despised and let pass occasions when many great personages have invited me upon honourable terms to keep them company, not wishing to give heed or in any way to listen; nevertheless, occasion, daughter of Providence and not of Fortune as the foolish would have, has caused me to break, with regard to you, my repose and my abstinence; for various reasons of which I will here set down several, beseeching you most earnestly to bear with the prolixity of this my writing with your customary benevolence, and to read it not alone as a prince busy with many matters, but as a learned man worthy of the meridian lantern or light of Diogenes. The first reason which prompts me to write to you at this hour rather than before when I knew as well as I now do, the learning, grace, diligence and virtue of one who justly bears methinks the famous loz, is because a new affinity has divinely risen between you and me. For God having appointed you Head of the Knights of the Holy Sepulchre, reduced to-day to the title of Malta, after that of Rhodes, so much so that although you have not yet made the journey of which you and those of your order bear the name, nevertheless you are that Head as Abbot or Father Prior of the Pilgrim Travellers of Jerusalem; which is the reason why I, who am of the number of the said Pilgrims though the least, wish to address myself to you. To the end that through your authority and learning, much more, thanks be to God, than through your exalted and excellent estate, not now being accustomed to nobility and principality, I may find means of returning to the company of reasonable men. Upon this point I should have a world of proposals to write or tell you, but above all things, I wish to come to the point. I desire that you as Abbot of the Pilgrims of the Sepulchre should give me, for life or for a time, a good and light room or dwelling in your lodging of St. John Lateran. For two reasons, the first being, because I hope little by little with time, if God lends me more time to live here below, before I begin to live beyond this death which now holds me, I may with your help return to the pursuit of my royal studies. The second is that, conversing familiarly with you, and in your house, where I may in the manner named enjoy your company and be familiar with you as I desire, I will manifest and cause you to possess and know a secret such as the world never before has heard, and never will there be a greater in this elementary world here below." Etc., etc.

12mo, morocco, g. e.

Rome, Francesco Zannetti, 1585.

Among the numerous institutions founded by Pope Gregory XIII. were various Missionary Colleges, including three in Japan, from which numerous Missionaries went to China, India, and Japan, and perhaps one of the happiest events of his pontificate was the arrival at Rome of four Japanese Ambassadors on March 22, 1585. They had been sent by the converted Kings of Bungo, Arima, and Omura, in Japan, to thank the Pope for the fatherly care he had shewn their country by sending them Jesuit Missionaries, who had taught them Christianity. These Ambassadors later on in 1585 witnessed the coronation of Sixtus V., and were created knights and patricians.

This scarce and interesting "relation" gives a short account of the reception of the Ambassadors, the letters sent to the Pope by the three Japanese Princes, the address made on behalf of the Ambassadors by Father Gasparre Gonsalvez, a missionary to Japan, and the reply made on behalf of the Pope, by Monsignor Antonio Boccapaduli.

The relation from Japan, by Father Froes, occupies most of the volume, and contains interesting information on affairs in Japan, including an account of the violent death of the celebrated Prince Nobunaga, a friend of the Christians and Missionaries, and the ensuing revolution; battles and war against his brother, who succeeded him. The news from China is from Fathers Ruggiero, Pasio, Cabrale, and Ricci.

Sabin No. 27779.

This was the product of three expeditions. The notes of Martin de Rada, or de Harrada, in the first expedition (along with Pedro de Sarmiento) in 1575, and those of Gonzalez de Mendoza on his mission of 1578, enabled the latter to write the Historia. A third journey in 1581, by Martin Ignacio de Loyola, furnished the Itinerario, which includes Mexico and the Philippines.

This Itinerario is very interesting. Fr. Ignacio on his voyage to China went via the Canaries and St. Domingo, from there he passed to Vera Cruz, across Mexico, between Mexico and Acapulco, and re-embarked from this port for the Philippines and China. Although brief, the account of the voyage is extremely interesting. He speaks of the Discovery of New Mexico by Ant. d'Espejo.

The itinerary gives curious details concerning the Canaries, St. Domingo, Jamaica, Cuba, Porto Rico, and especially Mexico. Ortelius, in his Atlas, declared that he had received more information concerning America from this Itinerary than from any other single book.

MANUSCRIPT ACCOUNT OF THE WAR BETWEEN THE TURKS AND PERSIANS, IN WHICH TURKEY ACQUIRED GEORGIA AND AZERBIJAN.

1587 A.D. [67] MICHELL (Giovani, Venetian Consul at Aleppo).

Relatione delli successi della guerra fra'l Turco, et Persiano da l'anno 1577, fino al 1587. Fatta dal Ilmo. Signor Gio: Micheli, ritornato dal Consolato d'Aleppo in Soria 1587.

Contemporary manuscript on 108 pages folio, of Signor Giovanni Micheli's account of the events in the war between the Turks and Persians from 1577 to 1587.

Folio, half morocco, t. c. g., by Riviere. Circa 1587. £25

An extremely interesting manuscript. Signor Giovanni Micheli was the Venetian Consul in Syria, stationed at Aleppo. He returned to Venice in 1587. At this period Venice was constantly on the defensive against Turkey, who was gradually taking her near Eastern Colonies from her. Consequently any news of events concerning Turkey, her wars with other countries, or her troubles, was of the greatest importance and interest to Venice, so it was the custom for Venetian Ambassadors, Consuls, Magistrates, and other officers stationed in the East, to make reports to the authorities of events of importance. This present manuscript is addressed "Excelentissimo Principe," which probably means the Doge of Venice.

The author of this manuscript should not be confused with Giovanni Minadoi, the celebrated author of the "History of the Warres between the Turkes and Persians" (see Nos. 74 and 76 in this catalogue). Minadoi was also stationed at the Venetian Consulate at Aleppo, in the capacity of Doctor, at the same time that Micheli was Consul. Minadoi, in the preface to his book, acknowledges the information and help given him by Giovanni Micheli. Consequently this manuscript may be considered as one of the sources used by Minadoi for his "History." The passage in which this acknowledgment is made reads:—"And, lastly, without regard of danger, of expenses, or of labour, I have enformed my self of every particularity, that possibly I could, by such men, as were esteemed no liars, but men of great authority, who were present for the most part at these actions. Which purpose and resolution of myne, was greatly favoured and assisted by three private and extraordinary means. First, by the credit and authoritie of Theodoro Balbi, and Giovanni Micheli, being then the right honorable Consules in Soria (Syria) for the Venetian Senate, two most noble, prudent, and valorouse subjects of the State of Venice: who most magnificently without sparing of any costes did favour me herein, and in all my other studies, whereunto I applyed my selfe in those countries."

Murád III. ascended the Ottoman throne in 1574, and from his reign started the decay of the Turkish Empire, owing to its internal corruption. Notwithstanding the state of affairs, some extensive and important, though not permanent, additions were made to the Empire. War was declared on Persia, and the Persian province of Azerbijan, and the country of Persia's ally, Georgia, were added to the Turkish Empire. The manuscript gives the history of this war.

- 1587 A.D. [68] HOLYWOOD (John); JOHANNES DE SACROBUSTO.
Sphaera. Addita sunt quaedam ad explanationem eorum quae in sphaera dicuntur facientia.
 With numerous woodcut, astronomical and cosmographical diagrams.
 12mo, limp vellum.
 Venice, 1587. £2 2s

Johannes de Sacro Busto, or Holywood, was a distinguished and learned scholar, living in the first part of the 13th century. Though born in England he was a teacher of mathematics and astrology at the University of Paris. Few mediæval literary works have enjoyed such extensive credit as his "Opusculum Sphericum," or "De Sphaera," of which sixty to seventy editions, generally provided with extensive commentaries, have been published. The work is a manual of the principles of astronomy and cosmography. The author here adopts the spherical form of the earth, and the existence of antipodes. At least he divides the surface of the earth into five zones. With slight modifications the map is inserted into almost all editions of Sacro Busto's "Sphaera." During the 14th and 15th centuries it was probably the only accessible general map of the world to a number of students.

Sabin No. 27776. Medina Vol. I., No. 361. Wagner, The Spanish South-West, pp. 66-67 (No. 7aa). Only three copies in U.S.A.

* * * This was the product of three missions. The notes of Martin de Rada, or de Harrada, in the first expedition (along with Pedro Sarmiento) in 1575, and those of Gonzalez de Mendoza on his mission in 1578, enabled the latter to write the Historia. A third journey in 1581, by Martin Ignacio de Loyola, furnished the Itinerario, which includes Mexico and the Philippines.

This Itinerario is very interesting. Fr. Ignacio on his Voyage to China went via the Canaries and St. Domingo, from there he passed to Vera Cruz, across Mexico, between Mexico and Acapulco, and re-embarked from this port for the Philippines and China. Although brief, the account of the Voyage is extremely interesting. He speaks of the discovery of New Mexico by Ant. d'Espejo.

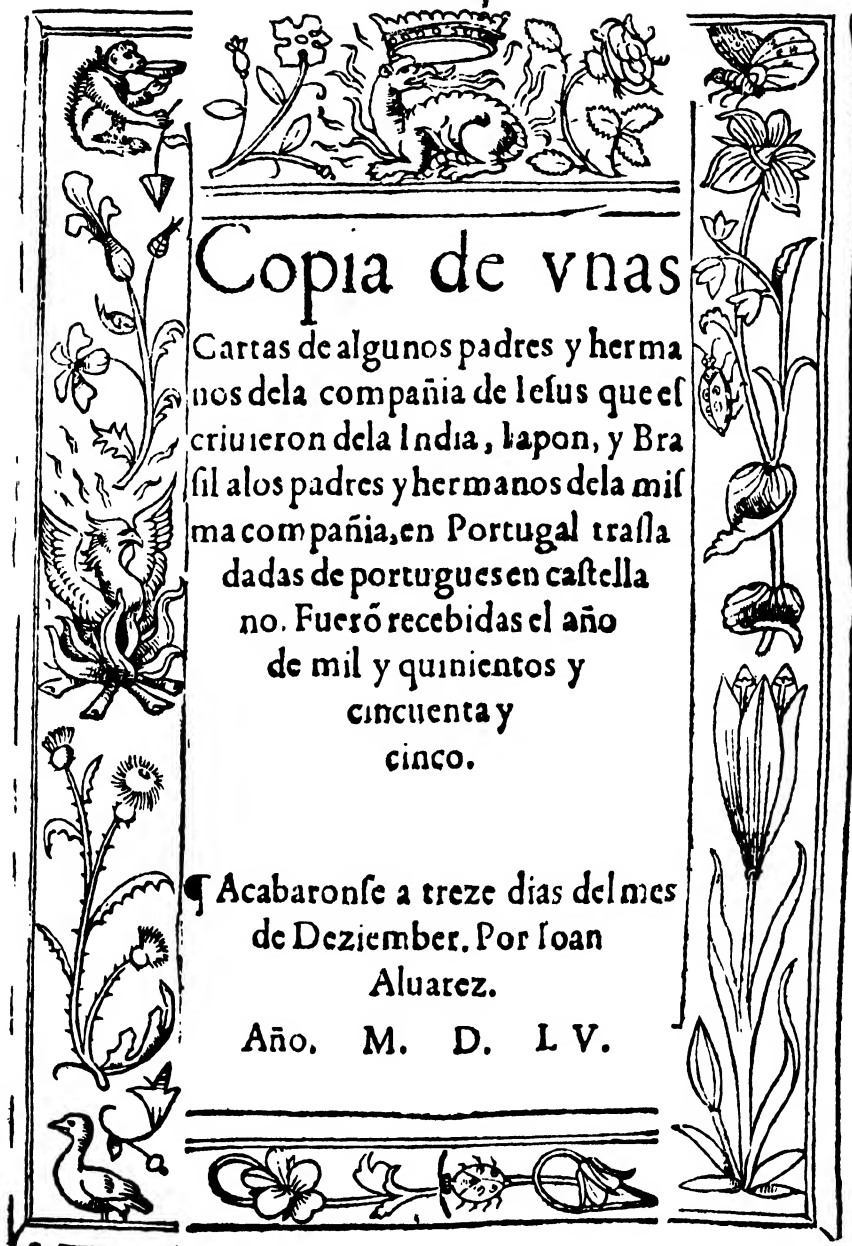

The itinerary gave curious details concerning the Canaries, St. Domingo, Jamaica, Cuba, Porto Rico, and especially Mexico. Ortelius, in his Atlas, declared that he had received more information concerning America, from this Itinerary, than from any other single book.

* * * Sabin No. 41375. Church Catalogue No. 321.

"This inestimable book, a treasure of all the learning respecting the East and West Indies and the Navigation thither, at the end of the 16th Century, has been in the highest esteem for nearly a century, and was given to each ship sailing to India, as a log-book. Hence the many editions, which is also the cause why fine copies, especially with all the plates and maps, are so very rare. A large part of the book is occupied by translations of original Spanish and Portuguese documents on geography, ethnography, statistics, navigation, etc., and in these respects the book is of the highest Importance and Authority."

"The English translation is by William Phillip. In addition to his own voyages, Linschoten added sailing directions taken from the accounts of Spanish and Portuguese navigators."

The work includes a long account of America, pp. 216-295, and "the severall partes thereof, as Nova Francia, Florida, Jamaica, etc.," and also accounts of Drake, Greynville, etc.

On page 1 is an old signature "Bar Greynville." This is probably the signature of Bernard Greynville or Grenville the eldest son of Sir Richard Greynville, the hero of the "Revenge." At the beginning of the volume are two pages in the autograph of Robert Orme, the celebrated writer on East Indian affairs. These notes give curious details concerning Linschoten and his work.

Written by William Parry, Gentleman, who accompanied Sir Anthony in his Travells.

FIRST EDITION. Small 4to, green morocco gilt, g: e., by Riviere.

(SEE ILLUSTRATION, PLATE No. XX.).

£31 10s

An exceeding scarce account of Sir Anthony Sherley's travels and Adventures, which is much rarer than his own account published in 1613.

A most interesting and well written little volume. The author commences by asking his readers to believe the wonders he is going to relate to them, and begs them not to think him a liar. He then describes his journey across to Holland, through Germany, across the Alps and so to Venice, in the company of Sir Anthony Sherley's Embassy to Persia. From Venice they set sail for the Levant, and, owing to Sherley's hotheadedness, ran foul of the Italian passengers on the boat, and are put ashore on the Island of Zante. From here they proceed to Cyprus where they are arrested by the Turks as spies, but gain their freedom through bribery. From Cyprus, Antioch is reached. At this point the author relates one of his greatest wonders, which he hardly expects people in England to believe. It is that the Turkish Merchants make use of a pigeon post from Mecca and Aleppo, and train their pigeons to carry letters concerning the state of the Markets from places three months' camel journey away.

Very bad treatment was experienced from the Turks, and at Babylon half their goods were seized. The author tells of the "olde tower of Babel" which is built solid, and even then "by common and just report, is about the height of Paules." Persia is finally reached, and they are given excellent treatment by the Shah, Abbas the Great. A curious account of the manners and customs of the Persians is given, and various details concerning Persia, among the most interesting of which is an account of the petroleum found at Baku. "Neere unto a towne called Backo in Persia, there issueth out of the earth in the manner of a water-spring, a certaine kind of oyle, in great abundance, which they (from all parts of the Persian dominions) do fetch upon Camels, Kine, and Asses, to burne in lamps, which are the lights they use in their houses." An account is given of the meeting with, and the misadventures of an Augustinian Friar, whose reputation, apparently, was not of the best.

The Shah took such a liking to Anthony Sherley that he was sent as his ambassador to Moscow. An account is given of the journey to Moscow, and of the bad reception given Sherley by the Russians, and of Sherley's journey back into Germany.

Aviendo su Magestad nombrado al Conde de Baylen, por Capitan General, para que vaya con gente de Guerra a los Reynos de Camboja, Sian, y Champan en las Indias Orientales à subjectarlos y ponerlos debaxo de su obediencia y Real poder.

Folio, half morocco, g. e.

Valladolid, 1603.

An exceedingly interesting and important report concerning the proposed conquest of the States of Cambodia, Cochin-China, Champa (Chumpon), and Siam, by the Spanish forces, under the Conde de Baylen, giving accounts of the condition of affairs in those countries, and numerous reasons by various learned authorities as to why these conquests should be made.

"The Conde de Baylen having been appointed by the King (Philip III.) his Captain General of the forces being sent to the Kingdoms of Cambodia, Siam, and Chumpon, in the East Indies, for their subjection to Spain, and their reduction to Christianity, it has been thought well to give the reasons why, with all justice, war should be made on these infidel Indians." Then follows a series of articles by Doctors Coronel, Sobrino, Pedro Lopez de Montoya, Father Francisco de Arciba, Juan de Siguenza, Juan de Salas, Father Diego Nuño, Father Garcia Guerra, Father Hieronymo de Tiedra, Father Alonso Perez, Father Baltasar Navarrete, and Father Gregorio Ruyz, all stating why they think it right to conquer these Lands.

The reasons given for their conquest are that they might be brought to Christianity, and because:—The King of Cambodia having been put back onto his throne by Spanish aid, had murdered from 25 to 30 Spaniards, including two missionaries, and had introduced the religion of Mohammed into his Kingdom; The King of Champan (Chumpon) was a piratical robber. He laid toll on all the commerce passing from India to China and Japan, invited Merchants to his Port and then robbed them. He hated and forbade Christianity; The King of Siam was a declared enemy of Christianity and an avowed friend of the Moors. He had taken many Christians captive, among them being some Franciscans and Dominicans, and he treated them cruelly; The King of Cochin-China was the declared enemy of Spain.

SUGGESTED PLANS FOR A SPANISH CONQUEST OF THE EAST INDIAN ARCHIPELAGO.

1603 A.D. [101] SEBIL DE GUARGA (Captain Pedro).

Memorial, commencing: "Señor, El Capitan Pedro Sebil de Guarga dize, que el fue uno de los quarenta Españoles que fueron con el socorro al Reyno de Camboja el año de 1596"; addressed to Philip II. of Spain, petitioning for an expedition to be sent to the Far East to conquer those countries for Spain, and their inhabitants to Christianity.

Folio, 4 pp, half morocco, gilt, g. e. (Madrid, circa 1603.)

£10 10s

Captain Pedro Sebil de Guarga states that he was one of the forty Spaniards who went to the relief of the King of Cambodia in 1596, and re-instated him on his throne after killing the usurper. He says that this king was desirous of becoming Christian, and had distributed two Provinces and many other gifts among his companions as a reward for their services. He had returned to Spain four years before to place his proposals before the King, for the conversion of Siam, Cochinchina, and even China. The authorized expedition for the conquest of these countries by the Conde de Baylen had met with the inevitable delays for eleven months and he petitions the King to commence operations, giving six reasons for doing so, among which he puts forward the possibility of Spain becoming mistress of the East Indian Archipelago from Singapore to Japan, together with India and China, when she would be able to protect the coasts of Peru, Mexico, and the Philippines from the persecutions of the English and the Dutch, and gives interesting suggestions concerning the plans of campaign. He also mentions the rumour that Don Juan Suarez Gallinato, the commander of the relief expedition to Cambodia, had been proclaimed King of that country in recognition of his services. He states that the Key to the Malay Peninsula is a very small State called Champan, which place the Spaniards must seize. This is probably Chumpon, at the narrowest point of the Malay Peninsula.

This is the exceedingly valuable and scarce earliest issue of the Portuguese account of the attacks on her Indian commerce by the Privateers of England and Holland.

The first half of the volume relates the capture of the Great Indian Galleon, the Capitania Santiago, by the Dutch. The account begins by narrating how in 1601 nine vessels left Lisbon for India, how they arrived there, and how the Galleon Santiago commenced her return voyage, deciding not to call at the Island of St. Helena. At that time some Dutch Privateers were at St. Helena under the command of Cornelius Sebastian. As fortune would have it, the Santiago Galleon was obliged to call at the Island, and there met the Dutch, with whom she immediately opened battle. After two days' fighting she was obliged to surrender, and her crew were taken on board a Dutch boat and marooned on the Island of Fernando Naronha, off the coast of Brazil. The author then gives a short account of Fernando Naronha, and tells how the shipwrecked crew were taken to Brazil, and finally arrived back in Portugal, and how the King of Portugal received the bad news.

Chapter IV. describes how the Navigation to Guinea, Brazil, and to the East came into Portuguese hands, and belonged to them rather than to any other nation; of the tyranny of the Dutch; and of how St. Helena was discovered and by whom, mentioning Columbus, etc.

The second part of the volume is perhaps the most interesting. In it is given an account of the Seventh Expedition of the Earl of Cumberland, from the Portuguese point of view. This expedition was the only serious attempt made in 1594 against Spanish and Portuguese commerce. On the 6th of April, the Earl of Cumberland's fleet, consisting of "The Royal Exchange," under Admiral George Cave, "The Mayflower," under Vice-Admiral Wm. Anthony, the "Sampson," under Capt. Nicholas Downton, and a small pinnace, the "Violet" of 24 tons, sailed from Plymouth with sealed orders. These orders were probably to attack shipping along the Spanish coast, and then to try and intercept the East Indian Carracks and Flota ships among the Azores. Several small prizes were taken, and on June 13, when between Fayal and Pico, a huge 2,000 ton carrack "Las Cinque Llagas" (here called the "Chagas") was sighted. The "Mayflower" engaged her that evening, and by midnight all three ships were attacking her, and the next morning the "Mayflower" and "Royal Exchange" lay alongside. Wm. Anthony was killed, and his ship fell out of the action. Soon afterwards Cave was mortally and Downton badly wounded. Fireworks were used by the Portuguese, and the English ships were several times set on fire. Finally, in the afternoon, the Carrack was set on fire by a shot from the "Sampson," and blew up the next morning, the Portuguese jumping into the water. Only a few were rescued, among them being a former governor of Mozambique, Don Nuno Velho Pereyra, and the Captain of a Galleon wrecked at Mozambique, Don Braz Correya. The Portuguese lost, in all, 1,000 people, including slaves and passengers, and the value of the boat was estimated at £3,500,000 at to-day's value, and was, according to the Venetian Ambassador, the richest vessel that had ever left the East Indies. On the return journey another great carrack was met, the "Nao Capitania" from India. This was summoned to surrender or promised the same fate as the "Chagas," but its captain, Don Luis Continho answered, "If your General has been at the burning of the 'Cinque Llagas,' so have I been at the burning and taking of the 'Revenge' and 'Richard Greenville," and he bid them do their utmost. The carrack was boarded, but a calm coming on, they left her in a severely damaged condition, and returned to their own boats. Trouble now occurred among the crews, and the carrack was allowed to escape.

It is interesting to note the peculiar spelling of English surnames used by the author. The Earl of Cumberland is called "Conde Chiumber Land"; Admiral Cave, "General Ckeve"; Sir Richard Greenville, "Richarte de Campo Verde"; Drake, "Draque"; etc.

The final chapter of ten pages treats of naval disasters, and the reason why so many of the Indian ships were lost, and describes the loss of Manoel de Sousa off Natal, the "Madre de Deos," "Santo Antonio," "Santo Alberto," and other famous ships, lost on the coasts of Brazil, the Cape of Good Hope, India, etc.

It was these attacks on the Spanish and Portuguese shipping that finally brought about the foundation of the English and Dutch East-India Companies, when the advantage of tapping the wealth of the Indies at their source was more fully realised.

Francesco Pasio was born at Bologna in 1551, and joined the Jesuits in 1572. Six years later he left Lisbon for the East Indies with Father Rodolphe Aquaviva, and passed the rest of his life in the Jesuit Missions in China and Japan, dying at Macao in 1612.

The letter, addressed to the General of the Company, Claudio Acquaviva, is dated from Nangasaki, Sept. 30th, 1601, and contains the report of the progress made by the Jesuit Missionaries during the past year, and reports from the College and Residency at Nangasaki, the establishments at Osaka and Macao, and the residencies at Amangucci and Bugen.

TO THE SULTAN OF TURKEY.

1605 A.D. [105] JAMES I. King of England.Letter signed "Jacobus R." (in Latin) to the Sultan Achmet.

1 page, folio. June 15th, 1605.

To the Sultan of Turkey, asking for the release of Sir Thomas Shirley, the Adventurer, who had been captured by the Turks while privateering in the Levant, 1603, and thrown into prison in Constantinople. James claims that Shirley had committed no crime, and being an English subject ought to be delivered up. The letter is couched in very high-flown language.

(Trans.):—"James, by the mercy of most gracious and almighty God, sole maker and ruler of the World, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland: most powerful and invincible defender of the true faith against all idolators falsely professing the name of Christ, to the most august and invincible Emperor, Sultan Achmet, the most potent ruler of the kingdom of the Mussulmans, and Monarch of the Eastern Empire, sole and supreme over all, Greeting, and many prosperous and happy years, with the greatest abundance of all things.

"Most august and invincible Emperor. If we did not consider our subject Thomas Shirley (who three years ago and more thrown into prison in Constantinople, is even now detained there) had committed no crime against Your Majesty, empire, or subjects, or not a very serious crime (if indeed he admits any crime); and that severe penalties have already been sufficiently suffered by him; after those letters which we wrote on his behalf last year, we should scarcely make a fresh entreaty. But we are sorry for this unfortunate and miserable man; nor less for his parents, to whom, deserving a better condition and fortune, a very great grief arises from the misfortunes of their son; and the more so, because their wealth, being seriously lessened and almost destroyed through adverse circumstances, unless your beneficence comes to their aid, his redemption and liberty will be entirely despaired of. Therefore, besides that he is our subject, and on that account ought to be given up to us, unless he deserved this punishment for some shameful crime; we are moved by their prayers, to entreat you again on his behalf; and by these letters solicit Your Majesty for his liberty to be effected." Etc.

* * * Shirley's release was effected in the following December on payment of eleven hundred dollars to his gaolers.

The letter was originally illuminated in gold, but this in several places has most curiously corroded through the paper.

The title reads in translation, "Account of the entrance of various Jesuit Fathers into China, the detailed events, and the most notable things they saw in that land." This interesting volume is really the copy of a letter sent by Father Diego de Pantoja from Pekin, to Father Louis de Guzman, the Provincial of Toledo, in Spain, and is dated March 9th, 1602. It contains many interesting details concerning China, and the customs of the Chinese.

Title reads (in translation): "The Journey of the Archbishop of Goa, Dom Aleixo de Menezes, Primate of East India, when he went to the Mountains of Malabar and to the places in which the Ancient Christians of St. Thomas reside and extricated them from their many errors and heresies in which they had fallen and brought them back to our Holy Faith."

When the Roman Catholic Missionaries first went to India they found on the Malabar Coast an Ancient body of Christians who claimed Spiritual descent from the Apostle St. Thomas. Attention had been drawn to this sect as early as the year 354, by an Arian named Theophilus, who was sent by Constantine on a Mission to Arabia Felix and Abyssinia. In 1597, Menezes, the Archbishop of Goa felt it his duty to visit these Syrian Christians of St. Thomas, who were spread throughout the hilly districts of the Malabar coast, and reclaim them from their various errors and safeguard them from coming under the Nestorian sway. This he did in spite of the great difficulties put in his way.

Full details of this important visitation are given in the present work, which is the one source whence all other writers have obtained their information. The Archbishop visited the various parishes and churches addressing the people, and caused the Nestorian books in their possession to be expurgated of their errors. The most prominent calumny brought against Menezes was that he caused all the Syriac books of the Community, which were all in manuscript, to be burnt. The works he destroyed were those teaching Nestorian errors, containing false legends, and books of sorceries and superstitious practices.

A great Synod was opened on 20 June, 1599, at the village of Udiampur, whence it is known as the Synod of Diamper. The various acts of this Synod were published in Portuguese, and form the second part of this work.

The third part of this work contains the Mass for the use of the Ancient Christians of St. Thomas, residing in the mountains of Malabar. (Two leaves are slightly cut into at top).

This capture of Ternate by da Cunha from the Dutch and the King of Ternate was an event of considerable importance.

The third memorial dated Feb. 3, 1609, of 5 pp., sets forth the services of Pedro de Baeza in the East Indies for a period of 25 years, and gives advice concerning trade in the East, and the rivalry of the Dutch, etc.

THE MANUSCRIPT JOURNAL OF THE

FIRST OFFICIAL VOYAGE FROM ENGLAND TO JAPAN, 1611-13.

Written by Captain Saris, Chief-in-Command, and presented by him to Sir Francis Bacon.

1611-17 A.D. [115] SARIS (Captain).

The First Voyage of the English to the Islands of Japan. Being the eighth voyage to the East Indies, under the Command of Captaine John Saris of London, with three Shippes, the Clouee, the Hector, and the Thomas, manned with 262 men. Begun, Aprill 18, 1611, And finished, September 27, 1614. Wherein are particularly related divers matters worthy of observation, both for Course, and Action during the said voyage. With what befell them in the Red Sea, Bantam, in Java Maior, the Molucca Islands, the Isle of Japan, by the inhabitants called Neffon [Nippon], the manner of their entertainment there; and discovery of the Country, 800 miles within land, the setting of an English Factorie, at Firando, with their returne home alonge the Coast of China.

Togedger with the Coppies of the Greate Turkes Passe, and Patent for Priviledges obtayned of the Emperour of the Islands of Japan for our English nation trading thither, and of the Kings Maiesties Letters & Presents, as alsoe of the like from the Emperour of JAPAN, and from the Kinge of FIRANDO, to his Highnes, 1617.

ORIGINAL MANUSCRIPT ACCOUNT OF THE VOYAGE, WRITTEN BY CAPTAIN SARIS HIMSELF. It is a volume of 121 pages,—not the rough log, but most beautifully written, apparently at leisure when he returned home, and specially for presentation to Sir Francis Bacon, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain.

Following the title page appears a long and very interesting signed dedication to Bacon, in which Saris writes,—“May it then please your honor, from your higher orbe, to cast an eye upon the wandering course of a lower planet, where your Lp. may viewe in a few howers, what was discovered in divers yeares. It hath hitherto lien in obscuritie, though under the survey of Mr. Richard Hakluyt . . . but death prevented him, and his last charge made it survive, and me so hardie as to present it to your Lordship's viewe.”

The Manuscript is a small folio, in its original vellum binding with gold ornamentation on the sides. 1611-17.

importance by writing out the full Journal of the Voyage and all its incidents, and presenting the Manuscript to the famous Lord Chancellor, Sir Francis Bacon. He, however, could not have foreseen that his was an epoch-making voyage—the first step towards the alliance which eventuated 300 years later—and that Japan would take her place as one of the Great Powers in the World.

Purchas, in 1625, gave to the world a portion of Saris's Journal. According to Saris's dedication of this MS. Hakluyt intended to do so, but his death supervened. The India Office Library possesses a somewhat similar Journal of Saris, of which the Hakluyt Society printed a portion in 1900. The present Manuscript varies considerably from that, and has some additional matter, as "Alterations hapned in Japan since my departure thence and whereto I have received intelligence from Captain Richard Cocke by his letters, dated in Firando in Japan, the 10th of September, 1614."

The Manuscript is not a mere Journal of the Voyage, but contains observations on the trade of Japan. Saris was in the employ of the East India Company, and just before entering on this voyage was Chief Factor at Bantam. His long residence at Bantam and the diligence shown by him in collecting useful information doubtless had their part in determining the choice of the directors. It is probable also that he had urged the desirability of attempting to open up trade with Japan. Information about that country he had, no doubt, been able to obtain from Dutch acquaintances, derived from Melchor Van Santvoort, who had been backwards and forwards more than once between Japan and Patani, though he could not have known the result of the Dutch expedition which had been despatched to Japan from Johore in May, 1609.

In his Commission, among other instructions, was: "Item, and being arriued att Japan, wee desier you to vse the best meanes to search out the most convenient and safest harbour to trade in, where you may sell cloth, leade, iron, and such other of our Natiue Comodities as by your abseruacion you shall finde most vendible there, wherein you are to be very spetially carefull, both whatt Colors and sortes of cloth and for whatt quantitie will there be vented, as alsoe to giue great chardge that your men offer noe offence to the people there, still keeping good watch and standinge vpon your guard, and that out of the danger of any Castle, Forte, or other Gallies or friggotts, to prevent any mischeefe that may happen, and to consult and take good aduise with the rest of the Factors and espetiallie with William Adams, an English man nowe resident there and in greate favour with the kinge as wee heare, to desire his opinion whatt course should be held, both for the delivery of his Majesties letters nowe sent, whatt presents are to (be) geuen, to whome, by whome, and in whatt manner the same is to be done, with all dilligence that shall be requisitt, obseruing carefully the tymes in keeping the Monsons in all places where you shall trade, for attayneinge to other portes, as occasion shall be offered. And for presentts wee haue sent with you as appeareth in the Invoice."

With him he took an Autograph Letter from King James 1st to the Emperor of Japan, which he duly presented, and took back home to England a Letter from the Emperor of Japan to James 1st which he sets out in the Journal, and also received the Emperor's privileges for trade in Japan.

"Minna Monttono, vei. ye. yeas."

John Saris, merchant and sea-captain, appears to have gone out to the East Indies in 1604 with Sir Henry Middleton. In October, 1605, when Middleton sailed from Bantam for the homeward voyage, Saris was left there as one of the factors for the East India Company; and there he remained till 1609, when he returned to England. On 18 April, 1611, he went out again as captain of the Clove and commander of the eighth voyage, the ships with him being the Hector and the Thomas. After touching at the Cape of Good Hope, and making a tedious voyage through the Mozambique Channel and down the East Coast of Africa, they arrived at Mocha on 16 March, 1611-12. At Assab Saris was joined by Middleton, anxious to revenge the indignities which had been offered him in the previous year; but a quarrel between the two—principally, it would seem, on the question of precedence—prevented their obtaining adequate compensation, and in August they separated with an angry feeling towards each other. Saris went to Bantam, where he arrived on 24 October.

He had instructions from the governor of the company to endeavour to open a trade with Japan, and was charged with presents and a letter from James I. to the Emperor. On 14 January, 1612-13, he sailed from Bantam in the Clove; and after visiting the Moluccas, where the influence of the Dutch rendered it impossible for him to procure a landing, he anchored on 11 June at Firando, where also the Dutch had a small factory. Here he was joined by William Adams, who was sent from Saruga to act as interpreter and conduct him to the Emperor's court. Journeying by way of Facata, the Straits of Xemina-seque (Simonoseki), Osaka, and thence to Fushimi (Miaco), they, on 6 September, reached Suruga, where the court was; "a city full as big as London." On the 7th the Emperor bid Saris welcome of so weary a journey, receiving his Majesty's letter from the general by the hands of the secretary. A few days later Saris journeyed to Quanto (Kyoto), distant some forty-five leagues, to see the Emperor's eldest son, and then, returning to the court, he received the Emperor's commission and privileges, authorising the agents of the company to reside and trade in any part of Japan. With these he set out again for Firando; and after establishing a factory there under the charge of Richard Cocks, and concluding an agreement with Adams (24 November) to act as a servant of the company, he returned to Bantam, which he reached in the end of December. Towards the middle of February, 1613-14, he sailed for England, and anchored at Plymouth on 27th September.—(D.N.B.).

Small 4to, 8 pp. wrappers. Cuenca, Pedro Viader, 1614.

A ballad poem containing a true account of an event which had recently taken place in Portuguese India, in which is related how a Portuguese cavalier named Philip Brito, who was the Governor and Captain General in those parts, conquered a heathen King of Pegu, and took from him one of the greatest treasures to be found in the World, of a value of more than seven hundred millions, which had been accumulating for more than two thousand years.

Don Felipe de Brito y Nicote, a celebrated adventurer, was a native of Lisbon but of French nationality. By doubtful means he became the Portuguese governor of Siriam or Thanlyeng, a town of the Rangoon district of the Pegu division; and then was made so-called King of Pegu. He made a Peace Treaty with the King of Taungu, who however, was defeated and made tributary by the King of Ava. Brito made this a pretext for attacking him, which he did, capturing him and his treasure of over a million in gold, in 1605. After a most adventurous career, in 1613, Brito was defeated and captured by the King of Ava, and was impaled on the walls of Siriam.

The above pamphlet, the only one Digges published on Indian subjects, was written in defence of the East India Company's monopoly.

Sir Dudley Digges was born in 1583, and after taking his degree at Oxford, spent some years in foreign travel. He was one of the early shareholders in the East India Company, and much favoured the North-West Passage project to the East. He went to Russia on a special trade mission, and was also sent to Holland to arrange the disputes between the English and Dutch East India Companies.

Sir Thomas Smith was the first Governor of the East India Company, and was much interested in the Muscovy Company, founded by his grandfather, Sir Andrew Judd. In 1604 he was sent to Russia as Special Ambassador. He went with Sir D. Digges to arrange the trading disputes with Holland. In addition to his interest in Eastern Voyages, he promoted and supported various attempts to discover the N.W. Passage round America, and Wm. Baffin named Smith's Sound after him. He was also one of the chief commissioners of the Navy, and Governor of the French and Somer Island Companies.

SECRET PASTORAL LETTER FROM THE JESUIT GENERAL TO HIS MISSIONARIES.

- 1617 A.D. [128] VITELLESCHI (Mutio), General of the Company of Jesus.
 Carta a los Padres, y hermanos de la Compañia de Jesus.
 12mo, calf, gilt.
 Rome, Privately Printed, 2nd January, 1617. £35

This booklet of 32 pages contains the instructions from the Jesuit General in Rome to the missionaries in India, China and Japan, and was privately printed, and certainly not intended for publication. He exhorts his fellow Jesuits who are missionaries to follow the example of St. Francis Xavier in their reverence and humility. He defends himself and the other missionaries from the attacks that are made on them. The attacks are based on the following suggestions: That the Jesuits put their hands on everything; That everything is dependent on the Jesuits; that the Jesuits have a very high opinion of themselves and a very low one of everyone else; that the Jesuits are intent on amassing riches; that the Jesuits are interested parties, and finally that they are political rather than spiritual men of action.

He refers specially to the persecution of the Jesuit missionaries in Japan, and recommends to the prayers of his fellow Jesuits, the welfare of Japan and of all the Indies.

En Philippinas, Por Antonio Damba, Impressor de Libros, 1618.

(SEE ILLUSTRATION, PLATE No. XXIII.)

£63

This relation of the death of Father Navarrete, in Japan, is of the greatest rarity. It appears to have been printed in the Philippine Islands by an unknown printer, Antonio Damba, as he says "Con Licencia," but we have failed to find his name as a printer. Retana in his work on printing in the Philippine Islands gives a reproduction of the title-page and states that in his opinion the book was printed in Mexico. We fail to see any reason for this assumption and have no doubt that the book was printed in the Philippine Islands, as the fate that would have overtaken a printer in Mexico who published a book without permission of the ecclesiastical and civil authorities would have been out of all proportion to the profit that he might have made from the sale of the book. Another reason why we believe the book to have been printed in the Philippine Islands, and not in Mexico, is, that there is no possible reason why it should not have been printed in the Philippine Islands, seeing that it was a relation of the death of a Jesuit missionary who had been martyred in that missionary diocese; Japan, China and the Philippine Islands being one missionary diocese.

Cordier, col. 289, gives a description of the work, but did not know the location of any copy.

1619 A.D. [133] RIOS CORONEL (Hernando de los).

Memorial to the King of Spain, commencing:—" Señor Hernando de los Rios Coronel, Procurador General de las Filipinas y estados Ecclesiastico y Secular, dize:."

Small 4to, 19 pp half morocco.

(Madrid, 1619.)

An interesting and important memorial to the King of Spain from the Procurador General of the Philippine Islands, pointing out the great importance of the Islands to Spain, and of the dangers threatening them from the English and Dutch enemies in those parts, and impressing upon the King that help must be sent out immediately, and that the whole of Spain's power must be brought to bear against the Dutch, both in Flanders and in the East. Rios Coronel speaks of the trade between the Philippines and Mexico, China, etc., and of how the Dutch are encroaching on it.

The author, Rios Coronel, played a very important part in the history of the Philippines. He was a soldier at Manila about the year 1580, and in 1605 returned to Spain as a priest and Inspector General of the Philippines, Maluccas, and the East Indian Archipelago. Although the King offered him a position on the Council of the Indies, Rios returned to the Philippines, refusing that honour in order to serve his country in a more suitable way. He reached Manila in 1610, found the Islands threatened by the Dutch, and was charged by the Islanders to return to Spain and inform the King of the danger the Philippines were in of becoming subject to the Dutch.

* * * This is an abbreviated version in Spanish verse of the famous Portuguese poem composed by Gerónimo de Cortereal on the tragic shipwreck of Manuel de Sousa de Sepulveda on the coast of Natal.

Manoel de Sousa left Cochim on February 3, 1552, in the great galleon Saint John, and met with a gale on the Natal coast which drove the ship ashore on May 12th. De Sousa and his wife and child, and a number of the crew, and some slaves escaped ashore. They endeavoured to reach Sofala, but encountered terrible privations, and were constantly attacked by the natives, and finally De Sousa and his family, after a 300 league journey overland, were stripped by the Kaffirs and perished. Only eight Portuguese and some slaves eventually escaped to Mozambique. It was said that the value of the cargo of the ill-fated vessel was worth a million in gold.

In 1624 two ships and six galleons were sent out to India from Lisbon, and Ruy Freire de Andrade was able to take a fleet to the Persian Gulf, and endeavour to cut off provisions from reaching Ormuz, which had just before been lost by the Portuguese to the Dutch. Ruy Freire de Andrada, having harassed the English and Dutch shipping in the Persian Gulf and off Ormuz, was obliged to retreat on the arrival of a combined English and Dutch Fleet. However, as Nuño Alvarez Botello had just arrived from Lisbon with reinforcements, he sent him with eight galleons against the combined fleet. He sailed at the beginning of 1625, and met 12 of the enemy ships in the sea of Ormuz. An engagement ensued, during which Ruy Freire arrived with reinforcements. The fight was indecisive, and the English and Dutch retired to the Bay of Comoran. The Portuguese, however, had considerable and Botello was wounded.

About the middle of February the two fleets again met and engaged one another, when another indecisive battle was fought, both sides suffering considerably; the Portuguese vessels were nearly dismasted, and lost two captains and 40 soldiers, but the English and Dutch are said to have lost 1,000 men in the three encounters, besides three ships which were sunk. The English and Dutch retired to Comoran, and the Portuguese to Muscat.

This scarce "relation" is "A Short Account of the History of the Successes of the Mission of the Barefoot Carmelites to Persia, from the year 1621 to 1624," is written by the Carmelite Prior stationed at the Persian Court at Ispahan, and contains interesting particulars of Persia under Shah Abbas the Great, and of her relations with Arabia, Turkey, England, and Spain.

In 1598 Sir Anthony and Robert Shirley arrived at the Court of Shah Abbas. Robert Shirley took service with the Shah and was sent as his Ambassador to England and Spain to try and open up trade with those countries. His proposals met with greater success in Spain than in England, and for some years, until 1622, he was stationed at Madrid as Persian Ambassador. While in Madrid, Spain sent a special Embassy to Persia, and Shah Abbas granted special favours to the Roman Catholic Missionaries in his realms, even allowing a Carmelite Prior to be stationed at his Court. This present "relation" is the report sent home by that Prior.

Marco Polo was supposed to have visited Tibet, but although he, and Rubruk mention that land, they, in all probability, never visited it. "The first European traveller who appears to have visited Lhasa is the Franciscan Odoric of Pordenone in the first half of the fourteenth century. It was but in 1624 that we have any real information on this country in a letter of the Portuguese Jesuit, Antonio de Andrade, dated Agra, 8 Nov., 1624, relating the Journey of this father to Lake Mansarovar and to Rudok; Andrade erroneously called the country he visited, Cathay." Thus this "relation" contains our earliest authentic information concerning Tibet.

We cannot trace the existence of any other copy of this work, which was unknown to Cordier.

These martyrs were the first three Japanese to suffer for their Faith. They had been converted by St. Francis Xavier and the other Jesuit Missionaries, and were among the 26 Christians executed by command of the Emperor Taicosama, or Hideyoshi, at Nagasaki, on Feb. 5, 1597. Taicosama's hostility to the Christians was turned into persecution owing to a remark made by a Spanish Captain, whose vessel had been wrecked on the Japanese Coast, and who had foolishly boasted that the sending of missionaries to Japan was only a device to prepare for a Spanish and Portuguese invasion.

Occupying 44 pages, it is based on the news sent home by Father Antonio Andrade, who penetrated into Tibet in 1624, and was the first European after the Franciscan Odoric of Pordenone, to enter that forbidden land. It treats on the quality of the land in Tibet; of the various Kingdoms contained therein; the great ignorance of the Lamas; building of the first Church in Tibet by order of the King there, etc. Andrade has given us our earliest authentic information concerning Tibet.

Father Borri or Burrus was one of the earliest missionaries to Cochin China, and after his return to Europe he taught mathematics at Coimbra and Lisbon, and made various improvements in the compass.

His work is most important for the early history of Cochin China, as he gives much information concerning that country apart from the usual account of the progress of the Missions. His account is in two parts, first, on the temporal state of the country—its boundaries, climate, soil, manners and customs of its inhabitants, elephants, etc., Government, commerce, and Wars. Secondly, its Spiritual State.

Sir Thos. Herbert went out to Persia in the train of Sir Dodmore Cotton, accredited as Ambassador to the King of Persia. He was able to make an extensive tour in Persia, visiting Coom, Cashan, Bagdad, and other important cities. He also visited the Cape of Good Hope, Madagascar, and Surat, and coasted the Eastern shores of N. America on his return to England. His account of these travels is written in a lively and agreeable style, and among the most curious of its contents is a dissertation to prove that America was discovered three hundred years before Columbus by the Welshman, Madoc ap Owen, and Herbert quotes the early Welsh Bards in evidence of Madoc's departure for an unknown Western land with ships and settlers. It is amusing that he points to the name of Cape Breton as a proof that his countrymen were there in the ninth century.

It was the custom for the various Venetian officials in Turkey, Ambassadors, Consuls, and Consular Magistrates, to make reports on the condition of affairs there when they returned to Venice. Turkey was the greatest enemy of Venice, and all information concerning events there was of great value and importance to Venice.

ONE OF THE FEW MINIATURES KNOWN OF THE DANCING DERVISHES.

1640 A.D. [205] THE DANCING DERVISHES.

Remarkable and beautifully painted miniature illuminated in gold and colours, by a Turkish artist, early XVIIth Century, of the dancing dervishes at Constantinople, opposite the Golden Horn.

Seven dancing dervishes are shown with a peculiar headgear which they still use to-day during the religious dance. They wear a coat and skirt of white, green, blue or yellow. To-day they wear white only. A band is performing and a large crowd of gaily clothed and turbanned sight-seers is watching the performance intently. Right at the back Constantinople and the Bosphorus covered with barques in full sail are visible.

On the reverse of miniature is a familiar scene in a Turkish garden, the lady of the house in Oriental attire with rich ornaments is having supper in the garden with her slave dressed in blue pouring out sherbet. An orchestra of four ladies is performing; the instruments used are a zither, a mandoline, a tambourine and a kind of violin. The background shows the magnificent orchard with fruit hanging from the trees and a charmingly arranged formal garden with gay flowers, the lilies being in full bloom. The lady is reclining beneath a plum tree laden with fruit. On the right a fountain is playing.

Measuring 10 by 4½ inches.

Turkey. Early 17th Century.

(SEE ILLUSTRATION, PLATE No. XXIX.).

£125

Religious representations among the Moslems are of exceeding rarity owing to the well-known prohibition against the reproduction of the human figure. Turkish miniatures are especially rare, and very few miniatures of this essentially Turkish and essentially religious scene of the Dancing Dervishes are known.

This miniature will be reproduced shortly in Sir Thomas Arnold's forthcoming book on Moslem religion in art.

Tavera No. 1246.

"This must have been a quarto volume from which Thévenot, in his work, published an extract in French entitled 'Mémoire pour le commerce des isles Philippines.' The book thus mentioned was already exceedingly rare in the year 1738, and we do not know of its existence at the present time in any library. Since Grau y Monfalcon wrote the memorials which he presented to the King for the Council of the Indies, he thought it useful to write the 'Justification,' (which we offer for sale above) which he dedicated to Bishop Palafox, who was the most influential member of the Royal Council of the Indies, in order to influence him personally and to present it as a resumé of the arguments he had presented in the earlier documents which the King had passed on for examination to the said Bishop.

"Grau lays stress on four chief points; firstly, in what form and in what quantity there should be trade with the Philippine Islands. Secondly, if permission should be given to a larger extent than heretofore to send merchandise from the Philippines to Mexico and return the value thereof in silver. Thirdly, if the permission already given to send merchandise should apply to goods of Chinese provenance or only to native products of the country. Fourthly, if permission should be given anew for Peru to trade to Mexico because of the damage that the Philippines suffered when this said trade had been suspended.

"It is interesting to note in this connection that in 1593, by a Royal decree dated 11th January, the merchants of the Philippines were forbidden to go to China to buy merchandise."

Giving an account of the forts and ships captured from the Dutch by the Spaniards in Brazil, or off the Brazilian Coast, during 1640, hoping that Pernambuco will soon be restored.

Mentioning that advice had reached them of the attacks by the Dutch, aided by the King of Achen, and others, with a total army of 100,000, on Malacca. Help had been rushed from Manilla and the Philippines, and this attack had been defeated. The letter gives an account of this victory, and adds that it is believed that the Dutch are going to attack the famous city of Goa. However, the Dutch again attacked, and captured Malacca, and started their factories there in 1640.

Very interesting work which contains much valuable material for the history of the missions in Asia, and the Orient in the 16th and early 17th centuries. There are many curious eulogies of these missionaries, Japanese, Portuguese, Spanish and Italian, and among them some of the most ardent propagators of Christianity among the Indians, such as José de Anchieta, Saint Francis Xavier, etc.

This is the only edition which has been published of this important Chronicle of the Jesuit Order, and it is this circumstance which partly explains the extreme rarity of copies. No copy of this work has appeared for sale for many years; even Pinto de Matos in his Manual of Portuguese Bibliography confessed that he had never seen a copy for sale.

The third part of the book is entirely devoted to Brazil from the first expedition of the six Jesuits who in 1549 accompanied Thome de Souza under the direction of Father Manoel da Nobrega.

Manuscript Document (in Spanish) signed by the King, with his Royal Sign Manual, giving full and very interesting instructions to the Viceroy-Elect of New Spain, the Conde da Alva, regarding the Philippines.

41 pp., folio.

Madrid, 28th May, 1649.

£52 10s

An important Document touching upon the administration of New Spain, consisting of sixty paragraphs of great historical interest.

Translation:—"I have been informed that there are many Spaniards who refuse to allow Religiosos to live on the estates where they own slaves, for their own selfish ends . . . and have annoyed them to such an extent that they have been compelled to leave the district. This is an offence to God and a great hindrance to the work of conversion; and it would be more just and better for their conscience, if the Spaniards had Religiosos living on their estates, as they are obliged to do . . . and henceforth, you shall order that whenever the prelates of the Orders shall desire to send Religiosos, to any towns where there is no religious community, they shall communicate with you, saying which Religiosos they intend to send, and to what districts, so that you may duly investigate and weigh the considerations, bearing in mind that this is especially important in the case of newly discovered places, for it is understood that where the districts are peaceful, there are monasteries already established there.

"And whilst on this subject, let it be known that in most cases where Religiosos have been sent for from New Galicia, the Chichimecos frontier, Nueva Viscaya, New Mexico, and the Philippine Islands, the monks have been diverted from the place of their destination, and the money expended has been drawn from my Treasury . . . do you see to it that they proceed, without fail, to the places for which they are destined." Etc.

This is one of the rarest and most valuable productions of the Jesuit private press in Goa. Innocencio, the Portuguese bibliographer, confessed that he had never seen a copy, but wrote that a bibliophile had been mentioned to him who had once possessed a copy. We can only trace the existence of one other copy.

The Shah-Nameh, or Epic of Kings by the prince of Persian poets, FIRDUSI, is one of the great works of the world's literature. It comprises one hundred and twenty thousand verses in Persian, and was finished by the author after thirty years' work on the 23rd of February 985 A.D. at the age of seventy. It comprises the space of three thousand years and it is almost impossible to give a layman an idea of the vastness of the scale on which Firdusi worked. Mahmoud of Ghazna, the ruling monarch of the day, persuaded Firdusi to undertake this gigantic task by the promise of a piece of gold for each pair of verses.

After spending thirty years in composing this vast poem, which gives the finest idea of the national wars of the Tartars and Persians, Firdusi was rewarded by 60,000 pieces of silver instead of the promised gold pieces. The money was brought to the poet at the moment that he was leaving the public baths. Piqued at the monarch's failure to keep his promise, Firdusi gave away his gift to the servants at the bath and the door-keepers.

The poet composed a particularly virulent satire on Mahmoud, and gave it to the king's secretary, asking him to present it to him when he saw him plunged in one of his habitual fits of melancholy. Immediately after handing the parcel of vitriolic verses, the poet disappeared and went to Bagdad, where he composed some verses in eulogy of the vizier of the Khalif, being as well acquainted with the niceties of Arabic as of Persian. The vizier gave him an apartment in his palace and the Prince of the Faithful presented him with the 60,000 pieces of gold that had been promised him by Mahmoud. A threatening letter from Mahmoud arrived soon at Bagdad and forced the Khalif to ask Firdusi to leave his town in view of Mahmoud's military renown.

On the point of leaving Bagdad, where his reception had been so hospitable, for Yemen, Firdusi heard that old friends had made his peace with Mahmoud. He returned to his native town, but a few days after his arrival, while walking with a child who recited verses from the SHAH NAMEH to him, the old man felt weak, and died after a few hours.

In 1020 A.D. while his coffin was being carried out of the town, the humble procession was stopped by a caravan of richly laden camels bringing sixty thousand pieces of gold from Mahmoud. The present was offered to his daughter who refused it with the words, "Firdusi's daughter does not need the presents of Kings." The money was then used to erect a magnificent tomb.

The Epic of Kings has been the favourite book for illustration by the Artists of Persia. The adventures of the invincible Persian hero Rustem, and his combats with men and spirits, are well depicted in the manuscript before us.

THE BEST 17TH CENTURY WORK ON THE PHILIPPINES.

1663 A.D. [287] COLIN (Francisco). Soc. Jesu.

Labor Evangelica, Ministerios Apostolicos de los obreros de la Compañia de Jesus, fundacion, y progressos de su provincia en las Islas Filipinas, parte primera (all published). Sacada de los manuscritos del P. Pedro Chirino.

With very large fine folding map engraved in 1659 by Marcos de Orozco.

Folio, half calf.

Madrid, 1663.

£28

Father Colin entered the Jesuit Order in 1606; in 1625 he embarked for the Philippines and preached there for some time; at a later date he went to convert the natives of the Island of Mindanao. He died near Manila in 1660.

His work, which is of great importance, is partly based on the unpublished documents of Father Chirino.

Scientifically considered, Colin's work is the best book on the Philippines of the seventeenth century. It is the first work in which the oldest data of real value are given on the Flora, Fauna, Geography and Languages of the Archipelago.

At the end there are some interesting biographical accounts of some Japanese nobles who took refuge in Manila when they were expelled from Japan for having been converted to Christianity.

An important book, with a fine impression of the scarce engraved map of the Philippines, and part of Borneo.

Retana, No. 127. Medina, Islas Filipinas, No. 191.

A fine copy of the exceedingly rare First Issue, originally in the possession of the Jesuits' "Office of the Indies" at Madrid.

"This History has always been considered one of the most valuable pearls of Phillipine literature, for Combes was an uncommonly intelligent observer who personally visited most of the localities which he describes, while occupying himself a high position in his order, so that he not only wrote but made history.

"His book and that of Forrest were made up to the time of Semper's travels, the authorities followed by all geographers.

"It is improbable that more than a few ever saw Combes' original, of which, in all Middle Europe, only one example is to be found (Chamisso's copy given to the Prussian State Library in Berlin).

"Especially interesting are the notes on the Negritos, showing that two hundred years ago they were comparatively common in localities in Mindanao, where they have now entirely disappeared.

"The zoologist, too, will be interested in Combes' statement that wild elephants were then to be found in the Islands."—Translation from Blumentritt.

And also an Article particularly relating to the English and Dutch East India Companyes, Concluded in the year 1674.

Official Manuscript written in a contemporary hand.

268 pp., folio, old calf, gilt. July, 1674.

£31 10s.

This Manuscript is of great interest and importance for the History of the East India Trade, as at this time the Dutch maritime power was supreme, and they owned a great number of islands and ports in the East Indies.

The Journal starts with a copy of the Royal appointment of the Commissioners by King Charles II. to meet with the Commissioners deputed by the States General of the United Provinces, to draw up the terms of a new Marine Treaty, concerning trade with the East Indies.

Full particulars are given with the Minutes of the Meetings of the Commissioners at Fishmonger's Hall, London, between July, 1674, and February, 1675.

At the first meeting of the Commissioners it was decided that they should "first proceed upon the Treaty Marine and then upon the business of the East Indies and deliver a project of Instructions and alterations to be made in the treaty Marine. . . . In regard to the present Treaty Marine, with the United Provinces, is to determine in or about the month of November next, that in the first place consideration be had of framing a new one, and in the doing thereof to avoid those things which are found in the present Treaty to be unequall, inconvenient and impracticable. . . ."

Following these preliminary instructions is a letter from the King appointing Mr. Bedford to be Secretary, and giving a brief outline of what is desired of the Commissioners, after which is a copy of the preliminary terms in Dutch and English, with each article separately discussed.

Translation:—"Since the death of the Licentiate Don Francisco de Coloma, we have lost no opportunity of acquainting you with the news, and the state of the worldly goods which he left.

"By the despatch boat which left these Islands for New Spain last year, '79, we gave you an account of how the Attorney General had asked in session for an embargo to be laid on the property under our care, to the value of twelve thousand pesos to secure the judgement . . . which should be given for Don Francisco. This petition was suspended until the month of November, '79, when a meeting of the Treasury Committee took place, at which the Governor of these Islands asked that a sum, up to seventy-two thousand pesos, should be reserved . . . as a loan to the Royal Treasury, for the needs of the Government. There were apparently no death duties, as such, but whenever short of funds, it appears that the Government could commandeer "loans" from the estate of dead people.

"We were thus induced to hand over twelve thousand pesos in that manner.

"The difficulty which exists at present is that, after what had been resolved at the said Meeting, the question of the Attorney's petition arose again. . . . The executors of Don Francisco were requested to declare what property and papers had been left in respect of his death, and Dr. Diego Calderon y Serrano, to whom the notification was made, asked that authority should be granted him to reply, protesting against this prejudice to the estate. . . . So you see that, until today, considerable work has been done in getting the Government to adjust and certify the true state of Don Francisco's affairs."

Further details of the legal position are gone into, with an explanation of the delay in settling the matter, due to changes in the personnel of the Treasury, etc.

Lithgow's celebrated travels were made through Italy, Greece, Turkey, Palestine, Syria, Egypt, Spain, Tunis, etc. "In spite of its absurd euphuistic style, where 'ruvidous vulgarity' stands for common people, and 'ovile flocks' for sheep, it is a book of uncommon value and interest, for its descriptions of men and manners even more than of places. Thus it is probably the earliest authority for coffee-drinking in Europe, Turkish baths, a pigeon-post between Aleppo and Bagdad, the long Turkish tobacco-pipes, artificial incubation, and the importation of currants from Zante to England, 'where some liquorous lips forsooth can now hardly digest Bread, Pasties, Broth, and bag-puddings, without these currants.'"

In which Sobieski graphically describes his victory over the Turkish Army under the grand-vizier Kara Mustafa, who was besieging the Austrians in Vienna. This great historic victory by the King of Poland, who had come to the rescue of the Austrians, raised the siege of the city and expelled the Turks from the country.

" I am more than certain you will greatly rejoice at the news I send you of the most decisive victory God our Lord has granted to our Armies after eight hours of continuous fighting against a large army of 180,000 Turkish soldiers, I having succeeded in the same space of time to relieve Vienna from the Siege, to make an immense number of prisoners, to destroy the greatest quantity of these barbarians, to sieze their guns and their principal flags (that of the Grand Vizier as well as his horses and tents comprised) and shortly to have such a sanguinary struggle uninterrupted for eight hours terminating with the flight of the Vizier and of the remnants of his army and with my remaining in undisputed possession of all his encampment extending more than a league from this town. Were I to tell you all the details of our success I would have too much to say, but as I am now going to follow up the routed enemy, I limit myself." Etc.

This is the manuscript dedication copy given to the King of Portugal. It is beautifully written, and the dedication to Pedro II. bears the autograph signature of Joao Ribeiro, the author; there are also several other manuscript corrections in the author's handwriting throughout the work.

The author served as Captain with the Portuguese forces in India. He was sent to Ceylon where he was one of those who defended the Island against the Dutch, and in his account he describes the engagements in which he took part. The work was preserved in Manuscript for 16 years when it was translated into French by Monsieur Legrand, and published in 1701 under the title "Histoire de l'Ile de Ceylan." In 1836 the "Academia Real das Sciencias" decided to publish it, and it formed Volume V. of their "Collecção de Noticias para a Historia e Geographia das Nações Ultramarinas."

The work itself is divided into three books, containing 24, 27, and 10 chapters respectively.

Book I. contains a general account of Ceylon, its provinces and fortresses; natural products; the rites, ceremonies, and customs of the inhabitants.

Book II. relates the progress of the War in Ceylon between the Portuguese and the natives and Dutch.

Book III. points out the losses sustained by the Portuguese in their conquest of India, and gives reasons why they should only seek to colonise the Island of Ceylon.

Owing to persecution the Protestants of Hungary rose under Emeric Tekeli and attacked the Imperial forces. They subsequently asked for Turkish help, and the Grand Vizier Kara Mustapha joined them, and siege was laid to Vienna. Sobieski, King of Poland, drove them back, saved Vienna and recaptured various places, finally obliging the Turks to retreat. The Turks, instead of blaming the Grand Vizier, the real cause of their defeat, laid the blame on Tekeli and he was taken a prisoner to Constantinople. This report describes the recapture of various cities by General Caraffa, and of the incarceration of Tekeli.

The opening chapters of the second part describe the voyage from France to Brazil, and give accounts of Pernambuco and Olinde; the Inhabitants of Brazil, their manners and customs, animals and fruits of the country; Present condition of the Governor of Brazil, his imprisonment by the Portuguese; feeling against the French. Collection of ninety-three Portuguese Manuscripts relating to the administration of the Portuguese Dominions in India and East Africa, with seven manuscript plans of forts, etc.

Thick folio, half calf. 1689-1749.

The greater number of these manuscripts are original and in the sender's autograph, while some are signed. The first MS. is an extremely interesting original letter, signed by the King of Portugal (Dom Joao V) consisting of twenty pages of instructions to the Marquis de Castello Novo, on his departure for India as Viceroy and Captain General of the Portuguese Dependency. He is instructed to observe the movements of his near neighbours, in order to be prepared against any attack; and is requested to try to re-establish the old friendly relations between India and Persia, which the late Marquez do Lourical, the former Viceroy, had attempted, "for you must know of its formidable power and about the acquisition of Thammas Kolican with his numerous armies, and the valuable assistance which they can give, with their troops, in favour of the State (India). You must know that recently they have conceived the idea of establishing a Navy, for which they have already bought some ships in Surat, and have ordered others to be built. And undoubtedly, if they should carry out their project it would be most useful to the State to make sure of the Persian squadrons, which in a few years will make themselves respected in these waters." Instructions are also given with regard to commerce, "and besides all I have referred to with regard to the temporal interests of the State, I must also impress upon you the need for equal efforts on behalf of the Religious interests, the Christian communities and Missions of those vast dominions of which God has constituted me Protector." The letter is dated from Lisbon, 25th March, 1744. (This Viceroy arrived in India in September).

There are also Reports of arms, munitions, supplies, etc., sent to India between the years 1732-1745; documents relating to the Royal Treasury and revenue of India; distributions by the prize courts; the Marattas in India; the forts at Mozambique; conditions for the surrender of the ports of Senna, Sofala, and the south coast; and several original documents on the government of India. Amongst the interesting transcripts is that of a Royal Decree, ordering the Viceroy to establish an archive to serve as a Torre de Tombo in the city of Goa, where all the official documents should be kept, and that facilities should be given to Dom Diogo de Couto to gain access to these papers to assist him in the writing of his history of India. There is also a chronological record of the Portuguese Viceroys, from the year 1622 (when Dom Francisco da Gama, Conde da Vidigueira officiated for the second time as Viceroy) to the year 1732; and a transcript of another early paper is that of the report on the commerce of Mozambique, from 1672 to 1739.

All these documents are bound together in one volume, and form a valuable and interesting record of the Portuguese administration in the Far East during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

ORIGINAL MANUSCRIPT OF THE ANNUAL LETTER FROM THE FAR EAST.

1680 A.D. [360] NUEVAS DESDE ORIENTE.

Manuscript in Spanish, beautifully written on 7 pp. of rice paper.
Folio, in buckram portfolio.

Cancheu, 14th October, 1689.

£52 10s

This is an original manuscript sent by one of the famous Spanish missionaries, an Aragonese, from Cancheu in China.

It contains news from the missions in the Orient, from India, Manjar, Siam, China, Macao, Manila.

The last paragraphs are entitled "Modo, como van, y vienen las Cartas a este Oriente," in which the Jesuit Father describes the manner, ways, and times, how letters are sent from the Orient to Europe, and from Europe to the Orient. "The advice boat leaves in December, of this year, viz., 1689, from Macao it takes three months to go to Goa, so that it arrives in that city in March. The letters are kept during the whole of the year 1690 in Goa. Thereafter they leave Goa in January, 1691, and arrive in Lisbon in September of the same year, and thence in a month or two they are received in Aragon. So that letters which are written in China here in October, 1689, arrive in Aragon in October, 1691. From Aragon they answer in January or February, 1692; these letters arrive in March in Lisbon, in which month, or at the beginning of April the ship for India leaves and arrives in Goa, in the same year, 1692. The letters wait there till April, 1693, when they leave for Macao, and in three months they arrive here. And so, the letters written in Spain, 1692, are received in Macao in August 1693, and thence they are sent to the Fathers who are in China here. In this manner it is clearly seen that four years are necessary for an answer to be received to a letter, with the provision that in this calculation there may be some slight difference, more or less, depending on the state of the sea and winds.

"This route via Portugal is very roundabout, but as experience has shown, the safest.

"If only the Portuguese had missionaries in the Orient, letters would come much more quickly. Quite fresh news is received, however, by way of Amsterdam, London and Brest; but, as it is necessary to have correspondents to send the letters on and there are difficulties in the way, this way is most difficult for us. I must not omit to mention the way via Manila, because although the letters are sometimes delayed others come so quickly, that neither via Goa nor via Batavia can they arrive any quicker. As an instance, in this very year 1689, we received the news of the election of our Very Rev. Father Gonzalez, via Portugal in August, but we had already had the news via Manila, in November of last year." Etc., etc.

* Actual manuscript letters sent by the early missionaries are of excessive rarity.

Although it bears no signature or date, this interesting list of old-world jewels refers to the legacy mentioned in items Nos. 324, 326, and 333 in this catalogue. Don Francisco de Coloma, a former Governor of the Philippine Islands, had died at Manila, leaving considerable property over which there was some controversy between his executor, Dr. Diego Calderon y Sarrano, and the Government. In a letter to the testator's brother in Mexico the executor mentions that he is sending him a chest of gold and jewels which he has saved from the rapacious tax-gatherers in Manila. This list is written in the same handwriting as the above-mentioned letter.

Christianity first came to Indo-China at the beginning of the sixteenth century, but progress was slow until Jesuit Missionaries arrived at the commencement of the seventeenth century, when it made rapid strides. A great persecution, however, broke out about 1680, owing to the rapidly growing power of the Bishops and Priests, and lasted for over 100 years. The Missionaries were repeatedly banished, but repeatedly returned, and a great many suffered martyrdom. This work describes the early years of this persecution.

Edinburgh, 1700. £4 4s

Sabin 78209.

The volume contains accounts of the life of Wm. Paterson, the founder of the Scheme; of how the Company was floated, and of its leading members; the expedition, and of the occurrences at Darien. The introduction is an appeal to Scotchmen not to waste their money in the Scheme. In one place the Author suggests that having once founded the Panama Colony, it was the Scots' intention to pass "over that Isthmus to the Phillipin Islands, California, China, and to Japan, if they could turn Dutch Men."

The whole work is written in an extraordinary satirical manner, and raised tremendous indignation in Scotland, so much so that the Treasury was required to offer a reward of £6,000 scots for the arrest of the author, and the book was condemned to be burnt by the public hangman. At the time a certain Walter Herries was supposed to be the author, but Halkett and Laing attribute it to James Hodges.

George Psalmanaazaar, the famous literary impostor, was a native of the south of France, where he received a good education. Owing to his poverty he took to the road as a beggar, and to bring himself into more prominence passed himself off as a Japanese and later as an inhabitant of Formosa. He invented an elaborate alphabet and grammar (illustrated in this work) and a worship of his own. Later he was baptised as a Protestant and came to England, where he was able to deceive nearly everyone. This work was written to improve his position, and gives an account of Formosa drawn largely from his imagination, and an account of his travels and reception in England.

Maillard de Tournon was the Papal Legate to India and China. He issued a decree in Pondicherry forbidding the missionaries to allow the further practice of the Malabar rites; he also issued another decree at Nanking in 1707 obliging the missionaries under pain of excommunication to abolish the Chinese rites practiced by the Christian communities there. These rites consisted chiefly in offering small sacrifices to Confucius and their ancestors, and in the use of the Chinese terms "heaven" and "supreme emperor" for God. On his attempt to abolish these essentially Chinese customs, the Emperor Kanghi ordered Tournon to be imprisoned at Macao, and sent Jesuits to Rome to protest against the decree. Tournon died in prison shortly afterwards, in 1710. Upon the announcement of his death, in Rome, Clement XI. praised his courage and loyalty, and approved his Decrees. This work contains an account of all these matters. The whole incident was of considerable importance, and was the basis of much ill-feeling towards the Jesuits.

This contains an account of the progress of the Portuguese Arms in India, and of the treaty of friendship and alliance between the Viceroy Vasco Fernandez Cesar de Menezes and the King of Kanara. Soon after Vasco Fernandes succeeded to his government he fell out with the King of Kanara, whereupon he proceeded with a small squadron to Barcelor, and having dismantled the fortress there, he burnt all the villages along the river banks, and killed all who attempted to offer any opposition. Calianapor, also on the Malabar Coast, suffered a similar fate, after which Vasco Fernandes bombarded Mangalor, Comuta, Gocorna, and Mirzeo, spreading terror, fire and death in every direction.

The treaty, for the most part, concerns Mangalor. Arab boats are forbidden to enter the port, and considerable benefits are accorded the Christian population. Towards the end particulars are given concerning other affairs in India, the succession of the new Mogul Emperor, and the sending of Father Joseph da Sylva to him with the Viceroy's congratulations, etc.

The "relation" appears to be based on the reports sent home to the King of Portugal, by the Viceroy.

VOYAGE FROM THE PHILIPPINES TO JAPAN OF THE FAMOUS ABBOT SIDOTTI.

1717 A.D. [451] MADRID (Augustin de).

Relacion del Viaje que hizo el Abad Don Juan Bautista Sydot desde Manila al Imperio de Japon embiado por N. S. Padre Clemente XI.

Folio, half morocco gilt, t. e. g.

Madrid, 1717.

£15 15s

Tavera, 1578, cannot quote the title correctly as he never saw a copy and only cites Huerta who gives an entirely erroneous title. The work is arranged by Agustin de Madrid, Franciscan Commissary General of Philippines, from the original letters, papers and diary of the Abbot Don Juan Bautista Sydot, referring to his arrival at Manila, and his journey and doings in Japan, together with a diary of his journey day by day.

(Title in translation):—"Relation of the voyage made by the Abbot Juan Bautista Sydot sent by Pope Clement XI. from Manila to the Empire of Japan."

An extremely valuable and important relation, and of the greatest rarity. At the end of the 16th and during the early years of the 17th Century the Christian religion was suppressed with the greatest vigour throughout Japan, and Japan remained a closed country for two centuries. Various attempts were made to enter, and all with disastrous results. "In 1642 five Jesuits embarked by stealth for Japan where they died after frightful tortures. They were followed in 1642 by five others who met the same fate, and an attempt on the part of the Dominicans of the Philippines in 1647 was not more fortunate. If other attempts were made to enter this tomb it is not known. The last known is the Abbé Sidotti, an Italian Missionary who in 1708, at the age of forty, landed unaccompanied on the Japanese coast. Delivered to the Governor of Nagasaki by the Prince of Satsuma, he was first examined in that town, and then, at the command of the Shogun, conducted at Yedo and condemned to perpetual imprisonment in a place which is still called 'Chirishitan Zaka' (Hill of the Christians). While there he baptised his two jailors and died after five years of captivity. The learned Arai Hakuseki, government interpreter in the examination of Sidotti, wrote his history."

This was translated from the Arabian, and really formed part of Masoudy's celebrated work, "Morodj-eddheheb." The travels related took place about the years 851 and 877 A.D., and are consequently some 400 years earlier than those of Marco Polo.

Ali-Abou'l-Hassan Masoudy was one of the greatest and most important of Arab historians, and lived in the 10th century.

The above is illustrative of the Rag-Mala, a collection of forty-two allied melodies, known and at once recognised by all educated Hindus. Each of these melodies is understood to be a musical description of a certain pictorial composition, or as the idea is reversible, each music-picture is a coloured interpretation of the particular melody with which it is associated. In other words, the musician plays from a picture, and the artist paints from a tune. Pictures illustrating the group of Indian musical compositions known as the Rag-Mala also often issued from the brush of the Pahari painter, and this combination of the two arts of painting the music is of special interest on account of the wide field which a study of this "visualised music" opens up. It emphasises, among other things, the peculiar position that the arts generally occupied in the culture of the people, and the close relation that existed between the different forms of artistic expression.

Medina, "La Imprenta en Manila," No. 458.

Retana mentions this work in his notes on another work of Correa y Villarreal's (No. 280), and remarks concerning it:—

"Dr. José Correa Villa Real, a Judge of the Audiencia at Manila, was one of the most illustrious legal personalities in that country during the earlier part of the eighteenth century. He judged many important cases. . . . He is the author of an extremely rare publication, the only copy known to us being the one in Don Antonio Graiño's possession." This is the publication offered herewith. The text refers to a famous lawsuit which created considerable stir in Manila at the time: "General Quintero died in 1703; his daughter was married to another General, Don José de Oscorta, who, in 1706, claimed from Padre Marron no less a sum than 130,000 pesos which, it was said, General Quintero had diverted from the channel for which he had originally bequeathed it, on the advice of Padre Marron. This led to a big lawsuit, in which the Archbishop Camacho intervened, and of which the writer gives detailed information in his curious book. Padre Marron, on his part, has left a manuscript on Quintero's famous will."

One of the most important works on the East, and especially so for its account of the Navigations of the Dutch in the East Indies. François Valentyn, the celebrated traveller, was born at Dordrecht about 1660, and went out to Batavia in 1685 as an ecclesiastic in the Dutch East-India Company's employ. His celebrated work, sometimes called the Encyclopædia of the Dutch Indies, was the result of all his researches and travels, and in it he treats of Dutch commerce in various parts of the East, and also of the Histories and Natural Histories of the various lands and districts described by him. Perhaps of all the places described, Amboyna is treated of with the fullest details.

 "Alexander Hamilton, merchant and author, describes himself as 'having a rambling mind and a fortune too narrow to allow him to travel like a gentleman.' He went to the East Indies in 1688, and remained there till 1723. During this time he seems to have followed a life of commercial adventure, sometimes as captain of a ship, sometimes as supercargo, sometimes in a ship of his own, or in one privately owned, sometimes in a ship of one or other of the rival companies, and so to have visited almost every port, from Jeddah in the Red Sea to Arnoy in China. His adventures and experiences are told in a most interesting manner in his 'New Account of the East Indies,' a work which, in the charm of its naive simplicity, perfect honesty, with some similarity of subject in its account of the manners and history of people little known, offers a closer parallel to the history of Herodotus than perhaps any other in modern literature."—Professor J. K. Laughton in Dict. Nat. Biography.

About 1634, Shahji Bhonsla, a Rajput soldier of fortune, joined with two of the Mohammedan States against the Mughals, and in 1646, his younger son Sivaji or Sevagy obtained possession of the hill fortress of Torna, twenty miles south-west of Poona. Being left unmolested he slowly strengthened his position and in time formed a National party out of the Hindu tribes of south-western India, which ultimately became the Mahratta confederacy. His ambition was to drive the Portuguese out of India, and in course of time they were deprived of some of the few possessions left them by the Dutch. Sevagy died in 1680. A scarce and important work marking the definite decline of the Portuguese Indian Empire, and the rise of the Mahratta Confederacy.

The Memorial was presented by Don Lorenzo de Rugama and Don Miguel Fernandez Manilla, on behalf of the City and Commercial Community of Manila, and in accordance with instructions forwarded by the Viceroy of Mexico, concerning, for the most part, the Commerce of the Philippines. It points out to the King, firstly, how essential commerce between Mexico and Manila is for the preservation and development of the Philippine Islands and the Catholic Faith; secondly, the capital needed for this commerce; thirdly, the impossibility of repaying this capital as long as Manila's trade with China in Silk, etc., is forbidden; fourthly, the real insignificance of the damage caused to Spain's silk trade with Mexico, should Manila be allowed to export silk to Acapulco (Mexico); lastly, that the Ordinance granted to the Philippines in 1726 should be continued, in spite of the adverse criticism of the Viceroy of Mexico.

3 vols., small folio, calf.

Lisbon, Domingo Gonsalves, 1736.

£15 15s

This edition of Couto is very rare. It contains fragments of the Ninth Decade, which were never printed till 1736. The best account of the Early Discoveries of the Portuguese in Asia (China, Japan, India).

The author was born in Lisbon in 1542, and went to India as a soldier and resided there for ten years. After a visit to his native country he returned to India, and took up the work of Barros, of which only three decades had at that time been published. "De Couto's ambition," says Theal, "was to bring that magnificent chronicle down to his own time. His writings attracted the notice of the King Philippe I. of Portugal, who . . . appointed Diogo de Couto Chronicler of the State of India, and Principal Custodian of the Archives there. The first of De Couto's decades covers the same ground as the fourth of De Barros, but there are eight others, so that between these two writers we have a chronicle covering a hundred and twenty years. Unfortunately, a small portion of De Couto's manuscript was destroyed by fire when the work was being printed, and it could not be recovered."

This is a very scarce account of the famous sieges of Goa and Chaul in 1570. In 1570 several Indian Princes, perceiving the vast increase of Portuguese Power in the East, decided to give it one final blow. An immense army of over 250,000 fighting men was gathered together, and siege was laid to Goa and Chaul. There were only a few hundred Portuguese in either place, yet they resisted a ten-months' siege and bombardment, and the enemy finally had to withdraw, after losing many thousands of men.

The third volume, "Missions of China and Japan," especially is of extreme rarity; very few copies of the work have ever reached Europe. Volumes I. and II. contain the History of the Franciscan Order in the Philippines from their foundation till 1741. In 1736 the Portuguese were constructing the fortress of Thana, and had been at work there for four years. The long delay caused great discontent in the town, and in addition the workmen were unpaid and unfed, so they invited the Mahrattas to take possession of the Island of Salsette (near Bombay). Salsette and other places were captured from the Portuguese, and the enemy marched on Bassein, which city, after two sieges and terrible assaults, was obliged to capitulate, the Portuguese retiring into Bombay. This work relates these disasters to the Portuguese arms in India.

Taking it as a whole it is based on the work of father San José, whose first edition was published in 1610; but as it was published so many years later it also combines the various improvements introduced by the Dominican and other writers. Its dedicatory prologue is especially important, and in it the author remarks, that this language may be considered the most general of all those tongues spoken in the Philippine Islands, as well as being the most central.

A few leaves slightly formed, otherwise a very fine copy. Medina devotes 7 pp. to a description of this work, and Retana 6 pp.

"This 'Arte' by father Totanes is considered the best of all the writings by whose help the Spaniards learnt the Tagala language." Taking it as a whole it is based on the work of father San José, whose first edition was published in 1610; but as it was published so many years later it also combines the various improvements introduced by the Dominican and other writers. Its dedicatory prologue is especially important, and in it the author remarks, that this language may be considered the most general of all those tongues spoken in the Philippine Islands, as well as being the most central.

A SCARCER AND EXTREMELY IMPORTANT WORK. BEING PRINTED ENTIRELY ON RICE PAPER, COPIES OF THIS WORK ARE USUALLY DAMAGED OR VERY BADLY WORMED.

Sabin 1625.

On the outbreak of war with Spain in 1739, Anson was recalled from Carolina (where he had been engaged on active service for many years, and where a town and county were named Ansonborough after him), and entrusted with the command of eight vessels, equipped to annoy the Spaniards in the South Seas, and to co-operate with Vernon across the Isthmus of Panama. No national advantage arrived from this voyage; he lost seven of his ships along the American coast and rounding Cape Horn, etc., and most of his men from scurvy, but was able to enrich himself and his surviving companions by the capture of a rich Spanish galleon on her passage from Acapulco to Manilla. His book met with a most favourable reception.

The copper plates comprise views along the Coast of Brazil, Patagonia, Juan Fernandes (Robinson Crusoe's Island), Philippine and other Islands; the burning of Payta; engagement with the Spanish Galleon, etc.

The discourse addressed to the "Reverend Brothers" at the secret session on 16th September, 1748, refers to the martyrdom of the Bishop of Mauricastra the previous year. Pedro Martyr Sanz, Vicar Apostolic, was one of the Dominican missionaries in Fu-kien, China, who were victimised during the anti-Catholic outbreak in the reign of the Emperor K'ien Lung. He, with four other Dominicans, was arrested, and after being tortured, was sentenced to death by the Viceroy of the Province in November, 1746. Sanz was martyred on 26th May, 1747; and was beatified by Leo XIII on 14th May, 1893.

As to his correspondent's lack of prudence in failing to comply with Chandasäeb's request that he should pass through Gingy.

The Nabob of Arcot died in 1749, and Chandasäeb's claim to the vacant throne had the support of Dupleix. The rival claimant was assisted by the English and the ensuing struggle played an important part in the fight between the two European Powers for the supremacy in India.

(Trans.):—"The Sire Thomas has just forwarded me your letter which announces your arrival at La Taupe. I hope your promptitude in coming here and in not passing through Gingy as Chandasäeb had begged you will not be distressing to that worthy man. A slower journey while not passing through Gingy would have been better suited to the present condition of affairs. God grant that this lack of prudence may not plunge you into sad difficulties. I have not been able to convince you up to now of the necessity of not abandoning that good man, I have not been able to succeed there, I am very vexed at it and hope with all my heart that I am mistaken in my fears which are only founded upon the knowledge I have of the unfaithfulness of the Moors. I wrote to you this morning to send back all your coolies here with the carriages in order to make expenses cease and to repair the wagons."

" . . . Fortune seems determined to accompany me to the last, every object, every sanguine wish, is upon the point of being completely fulfilled, and I am arrived to the Pinnacle of all I covet, by affirming, the Company shall, in spite of Envy, Malice, Faction, and Resentment, acknowledge, they are become the most opulent company in the world, by the battle of Plassey—and Sir Hannibal Hotpot shall acknowledge the same.

" I am preparing plans in abundance for you, you shall have very exact Charts of Bengal, Bahar, and Orissa, and of the Mogol Empire as far as Delhi at least—a map of the Ganges likewise, and all the other Rivers in consequence. . . . What think you of closing the third Volume of your history with an account of the King being at last placed in a situation of affluence and grandeur, the Vizier Shiya Doula being obliged to sue for Peace, which was granted upon very honourable terms, and the company being in possession of all the Revenues of Bengal, Bahar, and Orissa, amounting to four millions sterling per annum, and the country in a state of perfect tranquillity? " I must request you will not detain these a moment, they are dispatched upon Business of the utmost consequence to the Company, and are to have one thousand rupees if they perform their journey to Madras in 24 days. You are the best judge, if they can proceed any part of the way by water.

" The purport of our letter to the Presidency is to desire that Messrs. Russell, Aldessey, Kelsall and Flayer may be sent immediately to supply the vacant seats in Council by the suspension and resignation of Messrs. Burdett, Gray, Senior, & Leicester. This Settlement is rotten to the core, & I shall despair of going through with the undertaking without the assistance of the above mentioned Gentlemen.

" I have desired they may set out immediately Overland, & Mr. Kelsall may accompany them. Be sure to give me notice of their motions that I may send some Seapoys as far as Cuttack to escort them. They will I imagine have nothing to apprehend if they come privately & without a large attendance; they should have relays of Bearers.

" The Retormation of the Settlement, the reduction of the Military expenses & the collection of the Revenues of these Provinces is a great undertaking indeed." Etc.

£5 5s

Translation:—"Although you will have forgotten the steward of Nuestra Señora de la Porteria, who left Madrid to come to the Philippines on the 1st December, 1744, I have always had, still have, and will continue to have you in mind, and pray for your greatest happiness and that of your family. Perchance you will have thought it strange that I did not write to you in all these years; I have been acting as missionary for twenty years in the kingdoms of Cochín-China and Camboya, where it is difficult to find a sure means of despatching letters—this is the reason of my long delay in writing. Now that I am in the city of Manila, I do not wish to miss the opportunity of notifying you that I arrived here in 1769, to solicit help for the glory of God . . . but the enthusiasm has cooled down in these lands considerably, so that I have not been able to obtain what I sought, for which reason I am determined to return to Spain at the first opportunity to die at the feet of Our Lady. I do not do so now, as Sr. Don Simon de Anda, Governor of the Philippine Islands, has suggested that I should go to the kingdom of Camboya to help the Spaniards whom His Excellency intends to send for the purpose of establishing trade in that country, and soliciting such benefits from the King and Princes of the country, whence I came in the year 1751, with a deputation for the purpose of establishing Religiosos there to preach the Holy Faith, which they concede to us with full liberty to possess Churches for Divine Service.

" . . . Taking advantage of this opportunity, I am forwarding to you a Diary from the day I left the Chapel of La Porteria, in which I refer to all my trials and troubles, dangers I passed through, and miraculous escapes due to the benign influence of Our Lady, so that all you ladies of Nra. Sra. de la Porteria may have faith in her Patronage. . . . I am sending the Diary through the intermediary of Padre Juan Pereira, Senior Chaplain of the Frigate Venus, which left Manila for Cadiz in the middle of February."

Autograph letter signed to Lord Sydney. 4 pp., 4to.

Concerning appointments in India, as to the inadvisability of nominating persons against the wishes of the East India Company.

"I have seen Genl. Sloper, for whom I could not get much. I stated to him very explicitly that as things now stand, it is impossible he should go to Madras or Bengal, without Government's insisting on their Recommendation (under the Change of Circumstances) in a manner that would overrule the wishes of the Company; and that such a measure could not be taken by Government. . . . The more I consider this Business the more impossible I feel it in every Point of View for us to force a Recommendation on the Company. . . . The only Conduct that I think is left for us is to make the Company speak out as to their wishes with regard to Bengal, and then to leave them to follow those wishes without Objection on our Part.

"I really think that Campbell's service in India particularly make it no slight to Sloper to prefer Campbell for Bengal." Etc.

OF THE GREATEST IMPORTANCE.

1784 A.D. [657] INDIA (George III. and the East India Company, 1784).

Two most important Letters concerning the East India Company, one being an Autograph Letter signed from George III. to Wm. Pitt, condemning the Company.

1 page, 4to. Kew, 23rd September, 1784.

The other an Autograph Letter signed from Wm. Pitt to Viscount Sydney, on the King's letter.

3 pp., 4to. Brightelmston, 24th September (1784).

Together 4 pp., 4to.

These letters concern the power vested in the East India Company to appoint their own Commanders in India.

The King in his autograph letter to Pitt writes:—

"Whilst the army in India remains in such unfit hands as those of a Company of Merchants I cannot expect any good can be done, and therefore do not interest myself much as to the Officers that shall be appointed. If the Company nominate Major General Campbell there is reason to believe the choice will be in general approved; . . . as Lieut. Gen. Sloper has certainly incurred some expense it is trusted the Company will re-imburse him."

Pitt sends the King's letter on to Viscount Sydney, with a copy of a letter he had written to the Company (this also accompanies).

Pitt, commenting on the matter, says:—

"I trust you will think it as least as unexceptional a Mode as could be found of acquiescing; as it only refers back to the Company that on which they have a right to decide. I am in hopes the Directors will feel themselves bound to offer a handsome compensation to Sloper.

"I trust this most perplexing business will end here. The progress of it has given me more uneasiness than I hope any other subject which can arise in the circle of Indian Politics can ever again occasion. . . . I could not have a more distressing show to make than this, where my conviction is one way, and my inclination from many motives the other."

.. The accompanying copy of Pitt's letters to the Company is a formal acquiescence of the King's ministers to the Company's right of exercising its power of appointment.

BY THE CONTE DE FLEURIEU, FOR USE ON HIS JOURNEY.

In addition, pasted on to a blank portion of the Map, an original autograph signed statement by La Pérouse, dated from Paris Dec. 10, 1780, concerning a claim for a hundred louis from the French Government. Paris, 1785.

An extremely interesting relic of the ill-fated expedition of La Pérouse.

In 1785, Louis XVI., King of France, sent out a scientific and exploring expedition under La Pérouse for the discovery of the North-West Passage, and for the verification of various matters left doubtful by previous navigators, particularly concerning the geography of Japan, and whether Saghalien and Yezo were separate Islands or not. All arrangements for the expedition were left to the famous Comte de Fleurieu, who played such an important part in French Marine and Naval matters at that period.

The expedition, consisting of the Frigates "La Boussole" and "l'Astrolabe," reached the coast of Alaska on June 23, 1786, and was obliged, owing to storms, to give up the N.W. Passage project, and sailed south down the coast to Monterrey in California. It then crossed the Pacific, visiting the Sandwich Islands, Macao, and the Philippines, and finally broke new ground on the N.E. Coast of Asia. There the discovery of Sangar Strait and La Pérouse Strait showed that Saghalien and Yezo were each an independent Island. The explorers were well received by the Russian Authorities in Kamchatka, and M. Lesseps was sent home overland with the records of the expedition. In Dec., 1787, De Langle, Lamouon the Naturalist, and ten of the crew of the "Astrolabe" were massacred on one of the Navigator Islands; and, after reaching Botany Bay in safety, the rest of the expedition was never again heard of. It was not till 1825 that Captain Dillon found the wreckage of what must have been the two frigates, on the reefs of Vanikoro, an Island to the North of the New Hebrides.

This present map, copied from an old Dutch map of 1643, was delivered to La Pérouse by the Comte de Fleurieu for his guidance in exploring the Japanese coasts, and La Pérouse has written on it (in translation) "Map of part of Eso (Yezo) discovered by the Dutch in 1643, between the 33rd and 41st degrees of latitude, and sent to me, before my departure by Monsieur de Fleurieu, Laperouse." It should be noted, that the Island named by La Pérouse as Yezo, is really the main Island of Japan, Yezo lying further to the north. The Russian Island of Saghalien lies north of Yezo. It was for certain information concerning these Islands that the Expedition was partly sent. La Pérouse made other maps shewing the straits dividing the Islands, which, together with the particulars of the expedition, were sent back to France, across Asia, in the custody of Monsieur Lesseps; and this present map in all probability accompanied them. The map gives numerous coastal names, which seem to differ widely from those now in use, various ships' soundings along the coast, and various small islands to the south of the main Island.

The manuscript note affixed to the map, reads, in translation:—"I have made two journeys to Paris, the first in March by order of Monsieur de Fortines, the second in December under the Ministry of Monsieur de C——, the two journeys have caused me considerable expense, about a hundred louis. Laperouse." Then follows a short note authorising him a payment of 2,400 livres.

"If your Pandit Mutiram is returned have the goodness to supply me with a similar account of the Sun and the Ganges, with that, which you gave me for Cama; containing their rup or figure, their parentage and family, their Samagri or attendants, their dweja or standard, and their most poetical epithets. I have paid Gray the compliment of adopting his stanzas with a little alteration; and have hazarded a verse of 14 syllables to represent the long and rapid march of the holy river. Your description of Dipac, or Deipac lies before me; and my Hymns which at least rival Sternhold, if not Tate and Brady, owe their existence to your attentions. You have been to me, in regard to my mental food in India, what your friend Croftes has been in regard to my animal sustenances; for, without you, I should have been ignorant of Indian Mythology, and without him, I should not have had (while the Treasury was empty) either grain for my horse or rice for myself." The survey took thirteen years.

I am very sorry that I was weak enough to consent to young Philip's coming out to this country. You can hardly conceive, & nobody in England will believe how impossible it is for a Governor General who will not jibb, to provide for anybody here, who is not in the Company's service. It has cost me a great deal of money to send home people from here that I could not give bread to, & that I could not bear to see in want of it." Etc.

Concerning some verses of his father on the Isle of Skye, his own birthplace.

" I have got a Copy made out of the Poems and will leave it with you with pleasure: you are one of the few who can estimate their value and who ought to possess it. I shall give another Copy to Sir William Jones. It is a curious event in the affairs of Countries, that these Poems which were written in a scene so remote, so rude, and so barren as the ' Isle of Skye in 57 ' should be at this moment more interesting to me than the pride of having been a Governor General of India. It is equally curious that the Child, who was rambling about in that scene while the composition of these verses took place in his father's house, should have ever arisen to such a station in India." Etc.

Sabin, No. 36799. "The best and most complete work on the Philippine Islands; it is highly important in reference to the Spanish possessions in that country and to their Spanish-American territory."

This invaluable work is the best and most extensive history of the Philippines that has yet been written; it is at the same time the best chronicle of the Augustinian Monks, who settled in the Islands since their first discovery, as well as of their important missions in China and Japan. The work has served as the source for many modern writers on the same subject. The author, Father Juan de la Concepcion, died a year before his book began to be printed. Its publication was due to Father Joachim de la Virgen de Sopetran, Provincial of the Province of St. Nicholas.

The author was born in Madrid on July 1, 1724, and after his education at home he went to the Philippine Islands, where he lectured in Arts and Theology. He became the Provincial Prior and the Chronicler of the Province, Synodal Examiner to the Archbishop of Manila, and Provisor of the Bishop of Nueva Segovia. He returned sick to the city of Manilla, where he died in 1787.

Tavera, No. 687, can only quote three copies of this Manila-printed book—one in his own library, one in the British Museum, and one at the Bibliotheque Nationale, Paris.

The maps include the following:—Map of Japan, by Bagay; Map of Formosa, by Balgatas; Map of the Island of Guahan, by Phel. Sevilla; Map of Seipan and Tinian, by Phel. Sevilla; Map of the Caroline Isles, by Bagay; and the famous large map of the Philippine Isles by the Jesuit Murillo Velarde, engraved by Bagay in 1744.

£1 5s

An interesting letter on Indian affairs.

" Every thing here continues to go or fall as well as his Lordship's best friends could wish; and the public accounts of the success of all his measures, must no doubt be very acceptable to every person at home, who feels interested about the prosperity of this Country. Tippoo has kept our friends in the Carnatic in a little alarm for several months past, by assembling a little body of troops on it's Southern frontiers, but in the present state of our own force and where the French are neither able nor apparently willing to give him any material assistance, it is hardly possible to suppose that he would venture to break with us, and as an additional discouragement to him, he must be well informed that the most friendly intercourse subsists between his most powerful native neighbours and the Government. Improbable however as a Rupture was, Lord Cornwallis directed the Madras Government to take some precautionary steps, by making a little alteration in the disposition of their army; But all apprehensions are now pretty well over, as Tippoo has positively disclaimed his having any hostile intention towards the Company or its Allies. . . . The military negotiations that have been made from time to time have been as effectual as could have been expected. The King's troops at all the Presidencies are in excellent condition & the native troops at this Presidency are likewise in exceeding good order. But, except the Artillery, which is very fit for service, I cannot praise the Company's European troops, and until they are better recruited it is in vain to hope that they can be materially improved." Etc.

Mentions the war in India against Tippoo Sultan.

" . . . I most heartily rejoice at the pleasing account you give me of the perfect recovery & re-establishment of the King's health. Long, long may he enjoy it! As you say nothing of your own I am hopeful that you do not stand in need of Pills, &c., &c.

" Long ere this can reach you, you will have heard that we are closely engaged in a war with Tippoo, whose restless ambition knows no bounds.

" General Medows, at the head of the finest & most powerful Army that ever appeared in India, was on the 14th ulto. within one day's march of . . . a frontier Port of the Enemy: and we expect daily to hear of an action. A detachment sent from home in April to the assistance of the King of Travancore arrived by a few days too late to save his lines. But the judicious position taken by Colonel Hartley, who commands the detachment, effectually saved his country from devastations. Tippoo did not . . . attack him: nor did he venture to penetrate into the country. . . .

" As soon as the rainy season is over . . . I propose to assemble all our troops and to co-operate most heartily with General Medows. I think we cannot fail: the tyrant must be humbled. Should it be otherwise we certainly have no business in this country.

" I do not imagine that Lord Cornwallis will leave India until an honourable end shall have been put to the War."

VOYAGE TO CHINA.

1792-3 A.D. [694] MACARTNEY (George Earl). Diplomatist and Colonial Governor.

Original Manuscript Journal of his Voyage to China, 1792-3, on board H.M.S. Lion.

Comprising some 220 pp., folio. Bound in half vellum. £52 10s

A long and most graphic account of Macartney's Voyage out to China, touching at Madeira, Teneriffe, St. Jago of the Cape de Verd Islands, Rio de Janeiro, Tristan D'Acunha, Amsterdam Island, Java, Batavia, and Cochin-China, etc. At these various places he was most royally received and entertained. He gives an entrancing account of his receptions, then goes on to describe the manners and customs of the people, white residents and natives; also entering upon a dissertation on the country, politics, trade, natural history, etc., of the districts. In respect of Batavia there are as many as 60 pages of descriptive matter (unfortunately 10 further pages have been taken out at some time from this section).

His extensive reference, and comments on the Dutch and Chinese in the places visited are most valuable.

The Journal commences with a full list of the principal members of the expedition, which included two Chinese missionaries, Padre Pietro Whang and Padre Vincento Nyang.

*. In 1792 the exactions and acts of injustice perpetrated by the Chinese on English subjects, had become so notorious that it was decided to send an embassy to Peking, and this Expedition was arranged with Lord Macartney as ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary. It was equipped with great magnificence and on his arrival Macartney was most graciously received. He did homage to the Emperor in Chinese fashion, but although the Embassy collected much information, he could not obtain permission for a British minister resident in China.

The Journal stops just short of Macartney's arrival in China, the last words being "June 15th Saturday. This day set sail for China from Turon Bay with the Indostan, Jackall, and Clarence in company."

Translation:—"The first matter I have to announce to you is the death of my father. He ended his unhappy days on the 1st June this year, after a long illness, resulting from his attempt to make the voyage to Europe on the ship 'King Charles,' which left this bay on the 5th December, 1793, convoyed by five English ships, bound for Canton, which they eventually reached. However, their stay there was so prolonged, owing to the change of temperature and the fact that it was the coldest season of the year, that he contracted a grave illness and abandoned the idea of continuing the journey, merely endeavouring to retrace his way back in an English barque with which he was provided, to enable him to

to my late father; and as his executor, upon whom the duty of attending to all his affairs devolves, I am endeavouring in the short time at my disposal, to acquaint myself with all his affairs.

"I have no doubt that all you had offered to do on behalf of my father, will have been done and by now his affairs will be progressing. . . as well as the recovery of the sum of pesos which he claimed against the estate of Montenegro; and that which he would have liked to have collected from the share of tithes which you ascertained was in the hands of his (Montenegro's heirs in Galicia . . . in view of this event" (his father's death) "I need hardly say it would be most desirable to effect the recovery of the 6840 pesos; although we have the advantage of a deposit of 10,000 pesos belonging to the said Montenegro, as you affirm in your letter. . . I beg that you will remit the money as soon as it has been collected, by draft, made out to some individual concerned in this kind of commerce, as I think this would be the safest means of conveying the money.

"I had been wanting to send you a Power of Attorney on my behalf, as my father's executor, but this has not been possible. Should I be able to do so, I will, but in the meantime, I beg you not to divulge the news of my father's death; keep it as a secret, for various reasons, as it is highly desirable that you should negotiate in the matter of the recovery of the Montenegro money."

Further news is given of other affairs, and he remarks: "You will see how inundated I am with negotiations and cares, including that of four little brothers and a sister, dependent upon what I earn from a chaplaincy of the third order . . . we therefore look to you to have compassion on these poor children, and befriend this unhappy family."

NAPOLEON'S PROJECTED INVASION OF INDIA.

1798 A.D. [717] DUNDAS (Henry, 1st Viscount Melville). Secretary of War and Keeper of the Privy Seal of Scotland.

Letter signed to Lord Grenville.

13 pp., folio.

Wimbledon, 13th June, 1798.

£12 10s

A long and important dispatch discussing Napoleon's projected invasion of India, and the various routes, by which it might be attempted. This forms one of the finest letters on the subject.

" . . . I have thought it right to put my Ideas on paper upon the subject of the supposed Expedition of Buonaparte to Egypt, in order that this important subject with all its bearings, may receive a mature consideration. . . .

" But to return to the purpose of this letter which is directed to the further views of the French, as stated in your Intelligence, namely—The overthrow of our Indian Power, by an attack upon the British Territories there. I believe it is not a new idea, and I have reason to suppose that the Empress of Russia had it in contemplation, at the time that Hostilities between that Court and Great Britain were likely to take place.

" The transporting an Army to India from the Mediterranean must be attempted in one of four ways, either by Constantinople and the Black Sea, or secondly by vessels from the Red Sea. . . .

" The possession of Egypt has been long a favourite object both with the old and new French Government, and was always considered by them as the most obvious means of undermining the British power in India. . . . Buonaparte will, as much as possible, avoid the dangers of the Sea, which is not his element, but, trusting to his own exertions & the enthusiasm of his followers, endeavour to accomplish his object, by marching to Aleppo, cross the Euphrates, and following the example of Alexander, by following the River Euphrates and the Tigris, and descending to the Persian Gulph, and thence proceeding along the coast to the Indies." Etc., etc.

1798 A.D. [719] DUNDAS (Henry, 1st Viscount Melville). Secretary of War and Keeper of the Privy Seal of Scotland.

Letter (mostly in cipher) signed to the Earl of Mornington.

17 pp., 4to. Wimbledon, 16th June, 1798.

With official transcript. 7 pp., folio.

£11 10s

A very long and important letter respecting Napoleon's invasion of Egypt, and his projected invasions of England, Ireland and India.

"The subject of this letter arises from recent dispatches from the Cape of Good Hope, and the state of affairs in the Mediterranean in consequence of a French Fleet and a great armament being fitted out from Toulon and having actually sailed upon some secret expedition under Buonaparte. . . .

"By the latest intelligence it would appear that Egypt and India are the ultimate objects of this great preparation. We have intelligence of the Armament having actually sailed upon the 19th day of May and we entertain sanguine hopes that whatever the destination of it may be, the design of the Enemy will be frustrated, and the Armament itself destroyed by a powerful Squadron acting in the Mediterranean under the command of Sir Horatio Nelson. . . .

"If it is actually destined for Egypt, it appears to me to be a great and masterly stroke, and if successful, would be attended with very pernicious consequences to the interests of this country. It is intended with as little delay as possible to send a very respectable reinforcement of European force for the service of India." Etc., etc.

1799 A.D. [725] SCOTT (David). Secretary to the East India Company.

Autograph letter signed to the Earl of Mornington.

18 pp., 4to. London, 19th April, 1799.

£5 5s

A letter of great length on the East India Company's affairs and politics; also making most important references to Napoleon's invasion of Egypt, and the war on the Continent.

"The face of affairs in Europe seems much changed. The Archduke has beat the French under Jourdan in every different quarter; there have been several smart actions in which the French have retreated first one wing, then the other, then the main body, & so on. In the Grisson Country Genl. Motze has beat the French under Massena in a similar manner, and indeed as I before said, the Imperialists have since the opening of the Campaign gone on successfully in every quarter. About 2400 Russians are before this in Italy, and above 50000 more are advancing on. These added to the Imperial Armies, outnumber I conceive the whole of the French Forces, even including Buonapartes Army in Egypt. . . . If Buonaparte continued in Egypt could you not amuse him from the Red Sea with one of your Indian Brigades. If Zeman & your other friends dont molest you, it strikes me that you might annoy Buonaparte by land on one side, while we touch him up on the other." Etc.

£2 10s

On Napoleon's disastrous invasion of Egypt; also accepting the appointment of Deputy Chairman of the Court of Directors of the East India Company; and on Indian affairs and politics.

"General Kleber's having entered into a Convention with the Grand Vizier for being allowed to return unmolested with his Egyptian Army to France will be an agreeable piece of news to you. I doubt much however whether it would not have been better for us if they had staid where they were, as they most probably must have crumbled fast down, and at last been annihilated. One good effect I should hope their return to France would have, that of prejudicing their Countrymen against Buonaparte. You'll see that we took up Buonapartes proposal for Peace with a high hand and pointed directly to the propriety of establishing the Family of their old Monarchs again on the Throne." Etc.

1800 A.D. [729] RESUMEN HISTORICO SOBRE CHINA.

Manuscript (in Spanish) giving an historical account of China from the earliest times to the eighteenth century.

324 pp., oblong 8vo, unbound.

N.D. Circa 1798-1800.

The writer has contrived to introduce an extraordinary number of interesting facts into his comparatively short history of this ancient Empire. Beginning with an explanation of the name (which, originally Cin or Tsin, was bestowed upon the country by the natives of Cochin-China and Siam, and was finally evolved into its present European form of "China" by the Portuguese settlers) he proceeds to trace the origin of the people. "Though undoubtedly the oldest of modern nations, its prodigious antiquity is as much exaggerated as was that of ancient Egypt; this is a mania common to all peoples and individuals. . . the antiquity of China, reduced to its proper limits, does not extend beyond the period solidly defined by our Sacred books, which accord well with the records of secular historians. The ancient Persians, Greeks and Romans do not mention China. The Seres, whom a few moderns have confused with the Chinese, were the mercantile communities of Sericum, so called because they traded in silk. Had the Chinese Empire been so extensive, populous, and wisely governed in those remotest eras as some sages claim, surely the Persians in the course of their conquests, and dealings with India, would have heard of them. Likewise the Greeks, who, in their thirst for knowledge, sent their philosophers to India, would have welcomed the opportunity of meeting them if the Chinese had enjoyed the Asiatic reputation which they claim, in those days. It has been thought that the country referred to by Ptolemy as Sericum Regio must have been China, but it is more probable that it was Cochin-China."

Yu, the founder of the first Imperial dynasty, began his beneficent reign 2207 years B.C., and did much to further the welfare of his country. "He is said to have been so affable and accessible to his subjects, that it was the custom to sound a drum, or cymbals or a trumpet when anyone desired an audience, the nature of the visit being determined by one or other of these instruments! . . . and that on one occasion, while he was having a meal, he was interrupted twice and cheerfully left his table to attend to the matter upon which an audience was desired."

One of the earliest astronomical observations was recorded in the reign of Chan-Wang, the fourth emperor, when an eclipse was recorded in the year 2155 B.C. in Chu-King, and was later confined by the Jesuit Missionary, Adam Schaal. The first dynasty lasted 458 years and numbered seventeen monarchs, the last of his time being the egregious Kie, "whose memory is execrated even by the Chinese. Nothing was sacred to him; he is said to have caused a thousand men to be drowned in a vat of wine which he arranged for the purpose. His excesses caused his people to rise against him and they elected Tchin-Tang, a 'tributary' prince, to the throne."

The writer has much to say about Confucius, who re-established religious principles after a period of idolatry in China. "Cum-fu-cu or Con-fou-tse, Confucius, was born 520 years B.C. in Kio-feou, in the province of Lu, to-day known as Chan-tong, and was a contemporary of the Greek Pythagoras. From the earliest age he was addicted to the study of philosophy. He married at the age of nineteen, and on the birth of a son, he abandoned his wife in order to pursue his studies and preach philosophy. More prudent than Socrates, he was careful not to attack directly, the popular religious beliefs of his day. His reputation soon spread throughout the country, and amongst his three thousand followers, he selected seventy-two disciples to preach his doctrine in various parts of the Empire. At the age of 55 he was raised to the rank of Prime Minister of his native province of Lu. His wise rule soon made itself felt in the country, but it did not last long. The King, seduced by a woman, forgot the sage advice of his minister, who in despair at his inability to influence his sovereign for good, renounced the premiership and journeyed far from his native soil to seek, in other countries, princes worthy of his tuition. All the kings were anxious to have him in their states; and his precepts, yielding the best results in the kingdom of Lum, he retired there. . . . He died in his own country at the age of 73 years. A wonderful tomb was erected to his memory near the city of Kio-feou where he was wont to meet his disciples and teach them."

His precepts, however, were not entirely understood by his followers, for we find it recorded that instead of worshipping the Deity, gushing but misguided mandarins began to deify Confucius himself, offering sacrifices to him, "which he himself would certainly have disapproved of, for he was far from prescribing that such homage should be rendered to a human being; but that is how his followers have strayed from his principles, the same as the disciples of all other philosophers. The affection in which the Chinese hold the memory of Confucius, can be gauged by the privileges accorded to his descendants, since two thousand years ago."

Referring to other religious communities in China, the writer mentions that there is a Jewish community built in the city of Kai-Go-zani, the Italian Jesuit who was in charge of the same town, has published particulars about them. He says that according to their own tradition, their ancestors entered China during the epoch of the fifth dynasty, which began 206 years B.C. This is the period in which the Jews were first established in China. . . . It is asserted that the Mahomedans first came to China during the thirteenth dynasty which began in A.D. 636, whilst others say it was not until the eighteenth dynasty, circa, A.D. 951. It is certain that Christianity is as old-established in China as is Mohamedanism. "It is also stated that about the middle of the seventh century, some Christian missionaries were sent by the Patriarch of the Indies, and that the Emperor, Fai-tson, gave them permission to preach. In the year 1625 a stone table was discovered in Chang-tse, measuring ten feet by five, on which were inscribed the names of seventy preachers from India and Syria," who preached the Gospel to the Chinese. There was also a compendium of the principles of Christianity all written in Syriac. The inscription stated that the monument had been erected in 782. They say also that the arrival of these apostolic men is confirmed by various Arabic manuscripts, the originals of which are in the Library of the Jesuit College in Rome, of which there are copies in the Royal Library in Paris. . . . Certain it is, however, that towards the end of the sixteenth century when the European missionaries went to China for the first time, they did not find a trace of Christianity there.

In 1581, the Neapolitan Jesuit, Padre Miguel Roger, opened to his companions the career in which they distinguished themselves. Padre Mateo Ricci, of the same company, continued the work and with such success, that the Jesuits look upon him as the founder of that mission. Forty years later, the Dominicans and Franciscans went to reap the harvest sowed by the early Jesuit workers."

About 1800 A.D. [733] SHERIDAN (Richard Brinsley). Dramatist and Statesman.

Autograph Manuscript of the heads of a political speech to be given by him, entitled "Answer to Burke."

4 pp., folio. N.D.

£10 10s

An important political manuscript of the heads of a speech against Burke. It is written in his characteristic sprawling hand and is slightly undecipherable. A typed transcript accompanies.

Why did Burke say no temperate Reform could be made of the E.I.C. (East India Company). You must exclude those you would reform from all share in the Reform, vid, what were the enemies of the E.I.C. It was not a blundering tenacious despotism, but a corrupt country. The Peasant in France felt as the Gentry.

"We were all reforming after the Amer. War, but when the present danger is over nothing is done for Prevention, we cool and say it is not likely such things should occur again in our time—no such flare will happen in our time. Licentiousness is Liberty without a Head. I deny there is a sober spirit of resistance to Tyranny. Partly the substitute may be licentiousness which proves servility—Nobility does the thing with an inquisitive eye—look out for merit."

ON INDIAN AFFAIRS.

1800 A.D. [734] WELLESLEY (Richard Colley Wellesley, Marquis).
Governor-General of India. Afterwards Foreign Secretary.

Autograph Letter signed to David Scott.

8 pp., 4to.

Fort William, October 4th, 1800.

28 10s

A most important and lengthy letter marked "Private & Secret" on Indian Administration, trade, etc. Attacking Sir George Yonge "who is playing the fool" at the Cape.

"I hope my letter & proceedings relative to the India built ships, & private trade will meet with your wishes. I have given a most laborious attention to the subject & flatter myself that I have placed the Truth on impregnable ground & saved the trade for England by my timely interposition. . . . I am a dreadful Tyrant; arbitrary, jealous of power, sovereign Lord & Master, & impatient of all control in India, excepting that of my own sense of right & wrong. . . . The Princess Mary will probably have a long passage, as she must take my dispatches to that High Twaddler Sir George Yonge at the Cape, who is playing the fool, founding Theatres & Masquerade Houses, & violating your Charter, as if it were nothing better than an Opera Ticket. I enclose his order in Council, which would do honor to Mr. Fasbrook or Mr. Delpini. Really Mr. Dundas (tell him so) should check the excesses of this exorbitant & unconscionable Twaddlery. You will laugh when you read Sir George's formal dispatch to me 'On his Majesty's Service' offering me a Statue in Hottentot Square. I suppose the Hottentot Ladies will dance at the New Theatre—'a Pas de Graisse by Miss Houtnisquaw, with fresh guts, garbage, & grease for the occasion.' . . .

"The Hottentots should be subject to the Governor General in Council, the Cape should be a subordinate of Bengal—Andrew Barnard should be made a Governor or a Councillor, or something of power, & Delpini should be taken to the place from whence he came: in every respect whatsoever."

Discussing Napoleon's plans for the Invasion of England, and advocating the abandonment by the East India Company of their Settlement of Bencoolen. Also concerning the shipment of bullion to India.

"What projects the Corsican Adventurer may form to injure this Country and its Dependencies (except that of an attempt of a descent upon Great Britain, or Ireland) no person is well enough informed to know, but doubtless, disappointed as he has been in the objects of his ambition, and boiling as his breast is with revenge, nothing within the reach of his capability (and in the present state of Europe, this capability is great) will be omitted to be tried. I am unable, however, in turning my eyes round to our different, & dispers'd possessions in the different quarters of the Globe, to anticipate any great mischief except what may have arisen to us if France, deciding upon the knowledge which she obtained of our having suspended the evacuation of the Cape had made up her mind to give orders for acting hostilely against us; intending, if an actual rupture did not afterwards occur to shelter herself under this temporary suspension of the Treaty. In this case it is impossible to calculate what mischief may not have been effected by Linois's Squadron. I persuade myself from the circumstances, to which I have myself been a party, that this has not been the case, but my mind will not be reliev'd from its doubts till I hear the final destination of that Squadron." Simcoe, who had gained fame as Commander of the Queens Rangers in the American War, and afterwards as Governor of Upper Canada, never lived to take up his appointment as Commander-in-Chief in India, he dying just three months later (on 26th October). Grenville writes:—

"One of my first objects in the new office to which I have been called, has been to consider of a proper recommendation to the situation of Commander in Chief in India. The treatises of peace which have been signed there afford a good ground of hope that a state of tranquility so necessary to all the interests of the E. India Company will not soon be interrupted; but to be not unprepared for war is one of the best means of ensuing peace & therefore, as well now, as in war, the talents of an able officer are absolutely necessary even to the present situation of India. . . . I know no man who is so well qualified as you are to undertake this great and honourable task. . . . I have already ascertained that the sentiments of H.R.H. the Duke of York are in unison with ours upon the present occasion." Etc., etc.

" . . . China is at present in a very unsettled state, and opposition to everything that looks like innovation is very strong. Some unsuccessful efforts have been made to overturn the Government. . . . We must pray and wait for better days. I am going on with the translation of the Book of Psalms.

" I send a few Chinese books and have desired my friends in England to send you a copy of the first number of My Chinese Dictionary. My Grammar is I believe finished, but I have not yet received from Bengal any copies. My Grammar has been in Bengal since 1812. Lord Minto did not behave well in keeping it by him for a long time, and whilst it was lying by Mr. Maishman has printed one like it.

" Moral changes are commonly effected by slow degrees. Three thousand three hundred years have passed away before the account of Creation which Moses wrote in Palestine reached China in the language of the people who inhabit these lands. Who can tell how long the N. T. may be in producing the desired effect.

" To a person standing on the eastern verge of the Asiatic Continent, and who hears or knows little of Europe but of its perpetual wars, it presents a melancholy spectacle. European Nations appear little better than a few uncivilized States, filled with endless rancour against each other. Unwilling to listen to reason, and yet unable to conquer each other." Etc.

1817 A.D. [787] MEDINA Y MIRANDA (Antonio de).

Estados y Comparaciones de los Ingresos y Egresos de los Ramos de Real Hacienda en la Capital de nueva Espana por los años de 1812 á 1814. Original Manuscript of the Royal Treasury's Accounts, relating to the capital of New Spain from 1812 to 1814. 51 pp., small folio.

A beautifully written manuscript.

Specially bound for the Viceroy of New Spain, Don Juan Ruiz de Apodaca, in old Spanish leather (repaired), gilt, with doublures of the same and panels and flyleaves of mauve silk, with inscription in gold letters on fly-leaf, "Para El E. S. Virrey de N. E. D. Juan Ruiz de Apodaca."

Mexico, 4th January, 1817.

The accounts deal with a period which was by no means the least exciting in the turbulent history of Mexico. General dissatisfaction with existing conditions seems to have followed in the wake of the French Revolution; the revolt of the English Colonies in America; the uprising of the Spaniards against the Napoleonic tyranny at home, and their bitter hostility to the newly appointed Joseph Bonaparte, are some of the causes to which the subsequent Mexican Independence are attributed. The history of Mexico can be roughly divided into three distinct periods—the first is the pre-Cortés era; the second, the Spanish colonial period; and the third, the era of independence, which really began in 1810. Many attempts to throw off the Spanish yoke were made by the Mexicans during the decade following upon the restoration of the House of Bourbon in Spain and the accession of Ferdinand VII; and in 1821, Agustín Iturbide, General of the Royal Army, defeated the Viceroy Apodaca, took possession of Mexico, and and proclaimed himself Emperor, under the name of Agustín I, in 1822. The conqueror of Apodaca did not long remain in possession of his unstable throne, however, for he was ousted from it the following year, when Mexico became a federative republic and the decisive victory over the Spanish King's troops at Tampico in 1829 finally assured the Republic's independence.

It is interesting to note that amongst the items of public expenditure in this manuscript are the salaries paid to the troops. In 1812 over two million pesos went in soldiers' pay, as against one and a half million in 1813, and only three-quarters of a million in 1814, when the strength of the garrison was considerably cut down.

The compiler deplors the fact that the productive capacity and consequent rental value of the estates is reduced by quite one third, owing to the activities of the insurgents. The distribution of tithes is set out in detail; some of the ecclesiastical pensions provided for under a Royal Decree, dated 24th April, 1801, were cancelled by a further decree on the 12th April, 1812. The Treasury also maintained Missions "in the Californias, for the purpose of spreading the Catholic Faith."

The private estates had sustained much damage during the insurrection, with a consequent lack of produce; whilst the revenue derived from the sale of Tobacco, which had reached over two and three-quarter million pesos in 1812, was cut down by almost one-half the following year. Many reasons were attributed to this loss, amongst them the death from plague of over twenty thousand residents of Mexico city.

There was a deficit of approximately two and a quarter million pesos, which did not include the expenses—amounting to a further two and a half millions—connected with Havana, Puerto Rico, the Philippines, the Mariana Islands (now known as the Ladrone Islands), Florida, and the Legation at Philadelphia.

Raffles' celebrated work is especially valuable for the material it gives relative to the actual condition and manners of the Javanese in those times. His chief title to remembrance now, is that he secured to Great Britain the maritime supremacy of the Eastern Seas. He was instrumental in the purchase of the Island of Singapore, and the foundation of that city, and had his advice been followed Java and Sumatra had probably remained British possessions.

7 pp., 4to. Bayonne, 14th August, 1818.

Together, £3 3s

Translation:—"In the year 1806, when seated in my office, a handsome young Guardsman called upon me one day. I did not know him, and, asking him who he was, and in what way I could serve him, he replied that he had come to seek my protection and help, and that I had seen him once before in my house, where he had called with his brother or sister, and that his name was Arlequi.

"On hearing the name, I remembered that some time ago three young people had called to see me and had brought me a letter of introduction to them or their father, from Don Juan Francisco Orroz of Manila. I offered them due hospitality out of courtesy to the person who had introduced them, and out of respect for them also as children of a Colonel and the Governor of the Mariana Islands.

"After this visit they did not come to my house again, nor did I seek them out in their house, for two reasons. First, because presuming that they had brought other letters of introduction, they would have availed themselves of these in preference to mine; and, secondly, because, considering them rich people and not needing any assistance from me, I refrained from soliciting their friendship, and thought no more about them.

"I was therefore greatly surprised at this unexpected visit, which did not fail to rouse my interest and curiosity, coming from so gallant a youth. He declared that he would be compelled to retire from the Life Guards, as he was entirely destitute, having spent all the money which they had brought and not having received any remittance from Mexico, where their capital was."

Sir T. Stamford Raffles was the English governor of Java from 1811-1816, and of Bencoolen and its Dependencies 1817-1824. He brought the Island of Pulo Nias under British Authority and so put an end to the slave trade there; he founded Singapore, freed the slaves in Sumatra, and secured to Great Britain the maritime supremacy of the eastern seas. He returned to England in 1824, and one of his first acts was to draw up this Statement justifying his administration. It did not, however, fully justify him in the eyes of the Directors of the E. India Co. They censured his emancipation of the Company's slaves and his annexation of Pulo Nias, and, while generally approving his motives, plainly disapproved of his zeal.

OF INDIAN HISTORICAL IMPORTANCE.

1838-1842 A.D. [870] MACDONALD (Lt.-Colonel R.). British Officer in the first Afghan War. Deputy Adjt. Genl. of H.M. Forces in India. A series of 6 lengthy Autograph Letters signed of great historical importance in connection with the first Afghan War; extending to some 63 pp., 8vo and 4to, very closely but clearly written, and dated from Poona, Ghuznee, Cabool, Attock-on-the-Indus and Hyderabad.

3rd October, 1838, to 17th June, 1842.

29 9s

These letters, covering some 63 closely written pages, sent to Col. Egerton, C.B., form one of the most intensely interesting and instructive historical records ever compiled of the war with Dost Mahomed and subsequent events, including the evacuation of Cabul; some of the most critical periods in the history of India and the East.

The letters are written in the most graphic manner possible, one giving a detailed description of the Capture of Ghuznee (23rd July, 1839), in which the writer took an active part, the letter being written immediately after its fall; the others trace the subsequent events of the war down to the following February (1840) and one dated the 17th June, 1842, reviews the whole state of affairs at that date. Mention is also made of the incidents of the Khyber Pass and other famous historical events, the writer further freely criticises and praises many of the principal Officers engaged, and quotes various anecdotes concerning them as well as of the enemy. The whole collection forms a series of letters of almost unparalleled interest in connection with this war, and in addition they throw considerable light on the methods of native Indian governments.

Alex. Gerard was one of the greatest of Himalayan explorers, where he ascended heights previously considered inaccessible, and penetrated into Tibet as far as the Chinese frontier picquets. We are indebted to him for our earliest notions of the geological structure and remains of the Himalayas. He was a very entertaining and observant traveller; this, his first work, published a year after his death, was edited by George Lloyd.

" . . . If you decide on keeping the office of Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, with £2,000 a year salary, I should wish that it should be offered to Charles Wood, of course without a seat in the cabinet. Another way would be to give it to W. Campbell, with a peerage—I think he would take it. . . .

"The next subject is one that must be decided according to the position of foreign affairs. It is the state of the Estimates. It will not do to go on with a peace establishment which your revenue cannot support. But you have no ground for new taxes except the absolute necessity of being prepared for war. If the East is settled, if L. Philippe shews a real disposition for peace, and we can make arrangements for the defence of Afghanistan with the E. I. Company, the navy ought to be reduced, and the army not augmented. Indeed, if the affairs of the East are settled, we have no excuse for a war fleet in the Mediteranean." Etc.

After the first page Wellesley continues the letter in the form of a Memorandum or Despatch. In commencing, he says:—

"No less powerful cause than severe & repeated illness would have prevented me from sooner obeying your Lordship's very flattering commands, so obligingly communicated to me to give my opinion on the present condition of the great Empire now happily committed to yr. Lps. charge & so long entrusted to my hands. Yr. Lp. is so well acquainted with the general affairs of India that it would be presumptuous to suppose that I can add anything to that knowledge (so little the study of British Statesmen). But I can explain the principles on which I acted, the causes of my success or failure, whereon I failed, & I can thence derive some rules of conduct which may be found useful for the consideration of my successors, these statements, I now submit to Yr. Lordship in the enclosed paper with the most sincere good wishes for the prosperity & glory of yr. Lordship's Govt. & with the most confident expectation of yr. final & triumphant success." Etc.

Series of 25 fine coloured plates, and picturesque title, illustrative of the expedition to Cabul in 1838-40.

Large folio, old contemporary morocco, g. e.

London, 1842.

£4 4s

This rash expedition was undertaken with the view of re-establishing Shah Shuja as Amir of Afghanistan. The invasion of the country and the capture of Cabul were performed with little opposition, and the army returned to India, leaving a garrison of 8,000 behind. A general revolt broke out later, with the massacre of Burnes and other officers, and the forces were finally obliged to make a disastrous retreat, only one man reaching Jalalabad, wounded and half dead.

The plates, which are finished as water-colour drawings, are extremely fine, especially those representing the forces passing through the various defiles and passes. Other plates represent the native costume and views of Cabul, etc.

1844 A.D. [898] KINGLAKE (A. W.).

Eöthen, or Traces of Travel brought home from the East.
With two coloured plates.

FIRST EDITION, 8vo, new half morocco, gilt, uncut, t. e. g.
London, 1844.

This work may be considered as one of the classics of books on travel. "It shewed Kinglake to be a master of a most refined style and subtle humour, although he thinks it necessary to apologise for the possible failure of his attempts to subdue the 'almost boisterous tone' of the original writing. In truth, the work is more akin to Sterne's 'Sentimental Journey' than to an ordinary volume of travels, and is a delightful record of personal impressions in Syria and Palestine, rather than of outward facts. Not the least interesting of Kinglake's experience was his meeting with the eccentric Lady Hester Stanhope, the niece of the famous William Pitt, which he relates in this work.

Comprising, for the most part, Rajah Brooke's letters to his friend J. C. Templer, Admiral Keppel, and to his mother. In 1849 an outcry was raised in England at his supposed cruel conduct in the suppression of the pirates, and Brooke suggested that his Correspondence should be published to enable his countrymen to judge between him and his defamers, which was done on the renewal of these attacks against him in 1853. These letters contain a most interesting account of his voyage out to Sarawak in 1838, his survey of the coast, suppression of the Sarawak rebellion, appointment as Rajah, his administration, the suppression of the pirates in the Malayan Archipelago, and of his life until 1853.

ORIGINAL MANUSCRIPTS OF ALEXANDER WYLIE (1815-1887),
THE CELEBRATED MISSIONARY AND CHINESE SCHOLAR, dating from 1857 to 1881.

ALEXANDER WYLIE, Celebrated Missionary and Chinese Scholar, was born in London on 6th April, 1815, and was the youngest son of an oil and colour merchant in Drury Lane. His father came from Scotland about 1791. When a year old Alexander was sent to Scotland and placed under the care of a relative who lived on the Grampians. He was educated in a grammar school at Drumlithie in Kincardineshire, and after his return to London in a school at Chelsea. On leaving school he was apprenticed to a cabinet-maker.

Having picked up at a bookstall a copy of Joseph Henri de Prémare's "Notitia Linguae Sinicae," he learned sufficient Latin to read it, and its perusal led him to study the Chinese language. Procuring from the British and Foreign Bible Society a copy of the New Testament in Chinese, he began to read it, compiling a dictionary of symbols as he proceeded. When James Legge returned to England in 1846 he required a superintendent for the London Missionary Society's printing establishment at Shanghai. Wylie visited Legge, who found with surprise that he had so far mastered Chinese without assistance as to be able to read the gospels with tolerable accuracy. The London Missionary Society engaged him and sent him to the offices of (Sir) Charles Reed for six months to study printing, while Legge instructed him in Chinese. On 26th August, 1847, he arrived at Shanghai, his salary being paid by the Bible Society.

While in charge of the printing press he learned the French, German, Russian, Manchu, and Mongol languages, besides acquiring some knowledge of Greek, Uigur, and Sanskrit. He was deeply read in the history, geography, religion, philosophy, arts, and sciences of Eastern Asia, and had a wide acquaintance with Chinese literature. His knowledge of Chinese mathematics was unique. He made frequent expeditions with other missionaries into the interior of the country, and more than once encountered grave perils. In 1858 he accompanied Lord Elgin in his expedition up the Yang-tsze as a temporary agent of the Bible Society. He left Shanghai for England in 1860, and returning in 1863 as a permanent agent of the society, travelled through St. Petersburg and Siberia to Peking. He continued in charge of the agency until 1877. In 1868 he accompanied Griffith John, the Wesleyan missionary, on a journey of two thousand five hundred miles, proceeding up the Yang-tsze to the capital of Szechuan, thence to the source of the Han, and then to Hankow and Shanghai. In this tour he visited many places hitherto unknown to Europeans.

In ten years he dispersed among the people over a million copies of portions of the Bible. In 1877, owing to the failure of his eyesight from incessant proof-reading, he returned to England.

Although a protestant, Wylie was on good terms with many of the Jesuit and Dominican priests in China, and the Greek archimandrite was his personal friend. His translations and publications were of great service to Chinese scholars, and Henri Cordier states that Wylie's library was the foundation of his "Bibliotheca Sinica."

Alexander Wylie's Manuscripts—continued.[944] Euclid's Elements of Geometry (Ke hô yuên pùn).

Translated into Chinese by Alexander Wylie, with many geometrical diagrams.

The Original Manuscript of this Famous Translation of the great Mathematical Classic, written on about 560 pp. in Chinese characters.

Small thick 4to. half morocco. 1857.

£14 14s

This was one of Wylie's most famous literary works, and it consists of Books 7 to 15 of Euclid. Apparently he had the help of Native Scholars.

"The accompanying translation of the last nine Books of Euclid, was undertaken in accordance with the earnest desire of the native scholar, whose name (Le Shen-lan) is appended as the writer. His peculiar qualifications for the work were an inducement to proceed with it, and tended very materially to lighten the burden, which would in other circumstances fall on the foreign translator, while his name may be looked upon as a guarantee for accuracy in detail. The first draught was little more than half done, when application was made by Han Ying-pè, a Keû-jîn of Sung-kéang, for permission to print it at his own expense. The finished manuscript was committed to his care, and during the process of cutting the blocks, the work had the benefit of being revised by Koo Kwan-kwáng and Chang Wan-hoo, two talented scholars in the neighbourhood.

"To accompany this issue with an apology would almost seem out of place. Truth is one, and while we seek to promote its advancement in science, we are but preparing the way for its development in that loftier knowledge, which as Christian men and Missionaries, it is our chief desire to see consummated." — A. Wylie.

[1873] Journal of H. E. Koh Sung-taon, Ambassador from China to England; translated from the Chinese by Alexander Wylie, with a long introduction.

The Original Manuscript in the Autograph of the Translator.

64 leaves, folio, half morocco. Circa 1877.

£10 10s

A most interesting journal. Wylie's "Introductory Chapter" extends to 15 pp., in which he gives a synopsis of other Chinese narratives of travels.

Koh Sung-taon's embassy to England was on account of the massacre of the interpreter attached to the British Expedition of 1875 which crossed China from Burmah to Bhamo.

Wylie writes:—

"The intelligent appreciation of European institutions shewn by his Excellency, his ready adaptation to the novel circumstances in which he is placed, and the general suavity and good feeling that have marked his intercourse with all who have been brought into contact with him, have gained for him the esteem of Englishmen, and form a guarantee of the power for good that his influence will exert in his own country.

"We venture to think that such will be the estimate of those who read this first instalment of his journal since leaving China. The variety of topics touched upon, and the candour with which he compares the progress of the West, with the stagnant institutions of his own country, are apt to take us by surprise, as coming from an Oriental, and a native of one of the most conservative of Empires.

"The geography, the politics, the manners and customs, of almost every country on the way, come in for cursory remarks; and scarcely a day passes—of what appears to have been a voyage of much suffering—that he does not introduce some topic of interest; taking up by turns most of the great questions that have been recently occupying the attention of the public.

"The subject of the religions of the World come in for a share of attention also, but on this head, his ideas are but hazy. The conclusion he comes to is that the country of Confucius will compare favourably among the kingdoms of the Globe, in its universal toleration of creeds of every caste."

The Chinese Ambassador describes his visits to Hongkong, Singapore, Penang, Ceylon, etc., remarks on a German South Sea Expedition and on an English Arctic Expedition; passes most curious and interesting comments on the Protestant and Roman Catholic Religions, comparing them with the Mahometan and Chinese Religions; and writes in a curious and entertaining manner of many other subjects and places which engaged his interest during the voyage.

£2 10s

Discussing the defeat and dispersal of the rebels in the Indian mutiny.

"I enclose the only written report which I have received of the passage of the Rebels into the Cawnpore District. . . . I do not yet know the truth as to what has happened at Etawah; the report that the levy has lost its guns appears doubtful: nor do I know which way the Rebels are heading. According to a rumour (but it is nothing more) from Oude they are mostly up country men, and are making for their homes, not for Central India. If they wished to slink home they would not burn villages wantonly.

"I hope that no serious damage has been done at Etawah, a place which has weathered the thick of the storm successfully." Etc.

1858 A.D. [976] CANNING (Charles John, Earl).

Autograph Letter signed to the same.

Allahabad, March 25th, 1858.

£2 2s

Discussing with Sir Colin Campbell military movements during the Indian Mutiny.

"Unquestionably Rohilcand is the point to which operations should now be directed. From all the accounts which I receive, without any exception. I believe that the work to be done there is insignificant compared with what you have hitherto had; and it is certain that a very large proportion of the people (all the Hindoos) are ready to join in.

"I do not know whether you will think it incumbent upon you to take command of the force which may be sent there. If not I am of opinion that there would be great advantage, not personally to myself only, but publicly, in your remaining nearer to the centre of all that is going on; especially now that General Rose is drawing near, and as there will be a great deal to watch, if not to do, in and about Oude.

"I should like to know whom you propose to place in command at Lucknow." Etc.

 Thick 8vo, original cloth, uncut.
 London, 1858. 12s 6d
 An important work on Afghanistan. General Ferrier wrote at a time when there was considerable ill-feeling between England and France, and although many of his remarks are severe he was able to give England much sound advice regarding the countries on the N.W. Frontiers. Particulars concerning those parts had hitherto come from the East India Co.'s servants, and the opinions of a foreigner were important. He spoke of the seypoys joining the Russians and of a general revolt in India; a remarkable prophecy of the Mutiny. The work also contains much contemporary information of events in Persia, Bokhara, N. India, the Russian Menace, etc.

Calcutta, 16th January, 1859. £1 10s

"I received an official announcement of the 'Freedom' and 'Sword' conferred on me at Guildhall.

"The anxiety caused by the first announcement of your accident was happily of short duration, as next day we read accounts that you suffered so little in consequence that you were able to follow in pursuit of the enemy on an elephant. . . .

"We have been much vexed and surprised to hear that no arrangement has been entered into with the Nepaulisi Durbar which would have warranted your troops following up the rebels after they crossed the Nepaul frontier. . . . Had the matter been pressed some time ago, I should think there would have been little difficulty in inducing that Durbar to send intimation to the rebel Chiefs, and proclaim, that refuge would not be allowed to them within the Nepaul territory, and that if they did, after such warning, enter Nepaul, they would be treated as enemies." Etc.

Louis Haghe (1806-1885) was a very celebrated lithographer and water-colour painter. He was president of the "Royal Institute of Painters in Water-Colours" from 1873-1884, and was a regular exhibitor. Examples of his work are in the South Kensington Museum and in the print room at the British Museum. He executed the plates for many well known works, among which are Roberts's "Holy Land and Egypt," Atkinson's "Views and Sketches in Afghanistan," etc. It is curious to note, that as the artist was deformed in his right hand, all his work (including, of course, these paintings), was executed with his left hand.

These paintings, which are of an exceptional quality, comprise many illustrations of Turkish costume, bazaar scenes, etc., and include:—Sultan's Summer Palace; Egyptian or Drug Market; Jewel Market; Shoe-makers Market; S.E. Interior of St. Sophia; Slave Market; Poultry Market, with view of St. Sophia; Opium eaters Market; Saddlers' warehouse; Armenian Ladies; Hebrew Women of Balat; Turkish women; Greek women; Gipsies; etc.

£1 1s

An important letter on Indian military affairs; and on the designs of Russia.

"... I think the despatch of the expeditionary Force from India was a smart affair both on the part of those who originated it, and in the way in which it was executed. You may be sure the prompt despatch of this small Force has given most of the Courts in Europe something to think about. Especially Russia. I fancy she is on her way to Merv already. If she gets there before we make a corresponding move on this side, those who have under-rated the importance of that little cluster of mud huts in Central Asia will have to look to their reputations, be they civil or military. Tchernaieffs move means something, as also does the nomination of an Ambassador to Cabul, of rank equal to that of the Govr. Genl. of Turkestan! I believe however, that masterly inactivity is still strong at home. It will land us in a hole some day." Etc.

CHINESE GORDON ON CHINA, EGYPT, ETC.

1883 A.D. [1075] GORDON (General Charles George). "Chinese Gordon." Killed at Khartoum.

A very long autograph letter signed to his Biographer, D. J. Boulger, extending to as much as 9 pages, 4to.
Jaffa, 14th August, 1883.

With autograph addressed envelope bearing Austrian Levant postage stamp. £15

Of exceeding great length, as to the probability of a war between France and China, and mentioning the possibility of Li Hung Chang becoming Emperor; also concerning a projected canal through Palestine, and as to the desirability of evacuating Egypt, going into detail on the subject, winding up with the remark: "What a comfort to be free of Egypt and Soudan for ever."

"I shall not as far as I see leave Palestine, for it is a country which I delight in, from its old and varied history one's mind can always find good, besides, it is quiet. I do not think I could enlighten you about China, her game is and will be to wait events, and she will try and work so as to embroil us with France, if she does go to war, for this, there would be plenty of elements in the Treaty Ports—one may say humanly speaking, China going to war with France—must entail our following suite. It would be a bad thing in some ways for civilization, for the Chinese are so naturally bumptious, that any success would make them more so, and if allied to us, and they had success, it would be a bad lookout afterwards, this is PRIVATE. Li Hung Chang as Emperor, if such a thing came to pass, would be worse than the present Emperor, for he is sharp and clever, would unite China under a Chinese Dynasty, and be much more troublesome to deal with. Altogether I cannot think that the world would gain if China went to war with France; also I think it would be eventually bad for China. China being a queer country, we might expect queer things, and I believe if she did go to war, she would contract with Americans for the destruction of French fleets, and she would let loose a horde of adventurers with Dynamite, this is essentially her style of action, and Li Hung Chang would take it up, but do not say I think so.

"Here is a subject which I am interested in, if it could be done, the reasons are:

"1. We are in Egypt supporting an unpopular sovereign, whose tenure ends with departure of our troops. We offer no hope to the people of any solace, by the support and by the supporting of the Turco Circassian Pacha, who, I know, by experience, are hopeless. We neither govern or take responsibility, yet we support these vampires.

"3. We are mixed up with the Soudan, where we finished the Rebellion, and of the responsibility of which Govt. we cannot rid ourselves.

"4. We are in constant and increasing hot water with the French, and we gain no benefit from it, for the Canal still remains theirs.

"On the other hand, if we get a Firman from Sultan for the Palestine Canal:

"1. We lose the sacred sites of Jordan River, Capernaum, Bethsaida, and Tiberias, Jericho, not Engedi.

"2. We swamp a notoriously unhealthy valley where there are no Missions?

"3. We cut off the pest of the country of Palestine, the Bedouins.

"4. We are free of all four objections in re-occupation in Egypt.

"5. We gain the fertile lands of Moab and Ammon.

"Do not quote me if you write this, Oddly enough Ezekiel xlvii, 10, seems to say, the Dead Sea shall have fish like the Great Sea, i.e., the Mediterranean. Zech. xiv. speaks of two rivers, one going to Dead Sea, the other to Mediterranean.

"The cost would be:—

"Say 12 to 15,000,000, and what a comfort to be free of Egypt and Soudan for ever." Etc.

On his return to Portugal in 1505 he wrote his celebrated work "Esmeraldo de situ orbis." This remained in Manuscript for hundreds of years, and was published at the fourth centenary of Columbus.

The work itself is a Cosmography and guide to Navigation, and contains many important details concerning the early navigations of the Portuguese, more especially concerning Africa and the route to India.

With a long introduction of 144 columns, and 138 columns of notes by W. E. Retana.

Folio, calf, gilt.

Madrid (privately printed), 1897.

£5 5s

This is the re-issue of the excessively rare original edition of Father Combés' "Historia de las Islas de Mindanao, Jolo, y sus Adyacentes," Madrid 1667, a copy of which will be found in this catalogue, under No. 296.

"The commentary is especially valuable as giving information on the history of those islands, derived from unprinted sources. The preface contains Combés' biography, the history of Mindanao, and ethnographical, linguistic, and bibliographical notices. As Retana is an excellent bibliographer, he is at his best here, while in history his point of view is very partisan. In the linguistic portions we find traces of the pen of P. Pastells, long a missionary in Mindanao and superior of the Jesuit missions, province of Mindanao. . . In this portion twenty-nine Ave Marias in different Mindanao and Philippine languages are printed."—Translated from Blumentritt.

Only 200 copies of this magnificent work were privately issued by Mr. Tomkinson.

These volumes contain notices of many thousands of objects, which, while differing as to the material of which they are composed, the treatment to which the material has been subjected, and the date of their production, are yet alike in representing the Art of Japan, though under varied aspects. The collection has not been limited to antique specimens, and in no case has mere rarity been a sufficient passport for admission. While in most instances the various objects are typical examples of the finest work of old Japan, others are set among them to show that even in these days the hand of the Artist has in no wise lost its cunning. One of a hundred large paper copies. A most important work for the history of early exploration in the East Indian Archipelago, divided into seven parts, including the six accounts of the voyage.

1. Hernando Gallego's true and correct account of the voyage to the Western Isles.

2. Pedro Sarmiento's account.

3. Consecutive Account of all that happened in the Discovery of the Islands which Sr. Alvaro Mendana went to discover, 1567-8.

4. Alvaro de Mendana's second narrative of the discovery, sent to Philip II. of Spain.

5. Account of Mendana's voyage in quest of New Guinea.

6. Gomez Hres. Catoira's (Chief Purser) account of the voyage and discoveries.

7. Particular Account given to Capt. Fr. de Cadres by an Indian named Chepo; followed by a strange account of a ship driven to an Island in Latitude 18°, along which she cruized for 50 days.

The Solomon Islands were the first of the large Pacific Groups to be discovered, and the last to be explored. In 1568 Mendana's expedition sailed from Peru by order of the Spanish Government, spent six months among the Solomon Islands, and brought back to Peru a remarkably accurate account of its explorations; yet for 200 years the islands were lost to Europeans, and their existence even doubted.

"Undoubtedly you are a brick and a worthy chip of the Omar Khayyam block to give me another chance but alas! on the 21st I shall be away again. Moreover, though I love to meet goodfellows, I don't love after dinner speeches and who knows that some malevolent friend would not even spoil my digestion by calling upon me also to speak! That were dreadful! so let us give it up. Besides I know exactly what every man Jack of you is going to say, and have put into a dramatic on the Persian two rhymes which in good Suffolk may be thus rendered.

This work aims at facilitating the researches of the Bibliophile, the Librarian and the professional Bookseller, and is the essence of sixteen years of patient study and experience, presented concisely in a simple and eminently useful manner. The author claims that it is an Inventory of Hispanic-American Literature, "For example, the catalogues of Salva and Ticknor, the library of Gallardo, and the best-known works of this kind, only give an account of the works which they possess or have seen; but no publication exists in which we can see, arranged in chronological order, all the editions of our most celebrated writers."

£2 2s. per volume, or £18 18s for the set, payable in advance.

This work will be strictly limited to 1,500 numbered sets for Great Britain. Volume I. is now ready, and the succeeding volumes will be issued every few months until the work is completed.

"Although this marvellous recueil of stories was published in English between 1880 and 1884, it is practically unknown in Europe. The reasons for this are not hard to find, for it was issued in Bengal, the circulation was small and the work was never reprinted. The intrinsic merits of the book, coupled with the fascination of the tales themselves and the material offered to the student of Folk-lore, Anthropology and Comparative History of Literature, make it a thousand pities that, except to Sanskrit scholars, it is almost unknown.

"The translator of this work was the late Mr. C. H. Tawney, who carried out the difficult task of a literal translation in a manner only equalled by his great contemporary, Sir R. F. Burton, in The Thousand Nights and a Night.

"Burton knew the Katha Sarit Sāgara well, and fully realised that in comparing the Hindu and Arabic works the resemblances were as remarkable as the differences. The Arabs certainly possessed a wonderful gift of imagination and of exaggeration, but compared to that of the Hindus it pales to insignificance.

"Turning to the work itself, one is amazed by the mass of stories of every conceivable kind it contains. Animal stories dating back hundreds of years B.C., wild legends of Rig-Veda days explaining the creation of the earth, harrowing tales of blood-sucking vampires, beautiful and poetic love stories and vivid descriptions of terrible battles between gods, men or demons. All these are found in this storehouse of romance. Nor should it be forgotten that India is the true land of Romance, more so indeed than either Persia or Arabia, for India's own history is a romance hardly less exaggerated and enthralling than the tales themselves.

"The collector of these stories, Somadeva, was a man of genius who rightly ranks next to Kalidasa among Indian poets. His power of telling a story in a clear, entertaining and absorbing way is only equalled by the richness and diversity of his subject-matter. His knowledge of human nature, the elegance of his style, the beauty and force of his descriptions and the wit and wisdom of his aphorisms, are masterly in their execution.

"The Katha Sarit Sāgara is, of course, a much older book than The Thousand Nights and a Night, and is the origin of many tales in the Nights. Through them it has given ideas not only to Persian and Turkish authors, but also to the Western world through the pens of Boccaccio, Chaucer, La Fontaine, and their innumerable imitators."

"For example, the catalogues of Salva and Ticknor, the library of Gallardo, and the best-known works of this kind; only give an account of the works which they possess or have seen; but no other publication than this exists in which we can see, arranged in chronological order, all the editions of our most celebrated writers.

We are the sole agents for the above Bibliography for Great Britain, the British Empire, and the United States of America.
